France Plans Big Nuclear Warheads

Exultant Over Successful Sahara Blast

PARIS (AP) — France, exultant newcomer to the ranks of the world's atomic powers, declared Saturday night it will build a striking force of nuclear weapons to assure its "national independence."

The announcement came amid widespread criticism in other parts of the world over France's test explosion of an atomic device in the Sahara early Saturday.

There were reports that France plans to follow up with the explosion of an operational A-bomb.

Pierre Messmer, French defense minister, told a news conference: "We took an important step this morning with the explosion of the bomb. But we have not yet reached our goal. We will continue to work to give France a striking force of nuclear warheads and the means to deliver them so that the army can accomplish its mission of assuring national independence."

Messmer did not elaborate on his statement but it is believed he meant France intends to make nuclear missiles.

The successful test of a rocket device placed France in the ranks of the world's atomic powers along with the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

The United States and Britain took the news of their ally's accomplishment calmly but the Soviet Union, the only Communist member of the atomic club, "deplored" the French atom test.

A statement from the Tass news agency said: "If nuclear explosions should continue, the Soviet government will, naturally, not be able to overlook it and fail to draw the proper conclusions for its own security."

The Russians have maintained in the past they would continue a ban on nuclear weapons tests so long as the West observed the same ban.

Newsman asked Pierre Guillaumat, minister in charge of atomic affairs, if another atomic test is planned. He replied that the Sahara test area would continue to exist for some time.

Asked if France is considering making a hydrogen bomb, Guillaumat hesitated, then said: "The problem is being considered."

Chessman Bid Receives Reject From Justice

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black turned down Saturday a new bid for a stay of execution for convict author Caryl Chessman who for 11½ years has fought against death in California's gas chamber.

Black rejected the latest Chessman legal maneuver in a 22-word ruling.

"Finding no substantial federal questions presented by this record, the application for certificate of probable cause and stay of execution is denied," he said.

Chessman, whose case has captured world-wide attention, is scheduled to die in San Quentin prison next Friday for kidnapping, robbery and sex crimes.

ATTORNEY

A Los Angeles attorney for the Civil Liberties Union, A. L. Wirin, had appealed to Black. Wirin had described Chessman's latest request for a stay as the condemned man's "last knock on any judicial door."

However, Chessman petitioned the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Friday to overrule an opinion of its chief judge, Richard H. Chambers. This could provide the basis for further legal maneuvering.

In addition, Wirin said he

Judge Clears Oil Companies

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — U. S. District Court Judge Royce H. Savage freed 29 major oil companies Saturday of criminal charges that they conspired to raise and fix crude oil and gasoline prices.

The ruling came on a motion for acquittal filed by the companies after the federal government had completed its antitrust case earlier this week.

'Lady Be Good' Crew Remains Found In Shifting Desert Sand

SINKING WITH 40 ABOARD Japanese Ship Asking Help

HONOLULU (UPI) — A Japanese training ship with 40 crewmen aboard was sinking 950 miles southwest of here Saturday night within sight of a rescue vessel and aircraft.

The ship, the Toyama Maru, sent out a distress message saying she expected to sink at about 6:30 p.m. est. but two hours later she was still afloat as a tanker came into sight.

TANKER

The SS Lombardi, a standard oil tanker, radioed it was in visual contact with the Toyama Maru and exchanging blinker signals.

A Royal Air Force plane from Christmas Island was overhead, and other rescue planes and vessels were racing to the area about 170 miles northeast of Plamyra Island.

The Toyama Maru messaged that there were two lifeboats aboard and that she was taking water through a one-inch lead under her propeller shaft in the engine room.

U.S. Coast Guard headquarters here had already dispatched the cutter Basswood to the ship's aid, and the crew of another cutter was alerted.

A Coast Guard plane carrying a portable pump also was heading out but would probably not be there by the time the ship expected to sink.

Rickover Slams Pentagon Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover says he fears the United States may lose its lead over the Soviet Union in nuclear submarines because of meddling by Pentagon higher-ups in the work of his team of naval atomic experts.

"We must maintain our atomic submarines and nuclear propulsion," Rickover said.

"If we don't, we will give up 10 years of advantage, and that is what I'm afraid is going to happen to us because of the vast amount of interference to which my organization is subjected."

FATHER

Rickover, sometimes called the father of the atomic submarine, appeared recently before the Senate Space Committee and the Senate subcommittee. His testimony, given in secret, was made public Saturday after being screened for security reasons.

Asked about the over-all contest between the Soviet Union and this country, Rickover replied: "We are ahead of them now technologically, but as far as the rate of progress is concerned they definitely are ahead of us."

Authorized

The State Board of Education has authorized Northeast State college to open a nursing department in September.

This action from Baton Rouge resulted after the college had submitted a favorable report on the number of students that can be expected here.

A four year program is planned.

The survey was made by Miss Christine Oglesby, dean, and Miss Lillian Eno, associate professor of the University of Mississippi School of Nursing. These two visited Northeast State last month and in their report showed that Monroe is located in a

City's Master Plan Ready For Showing

By SAM HANNA Staff Writer

City planning was merely in the talking stage just a few years ago in Monroe, but today it's a thing of the present.

In fact, Monroe's Master Plan, after over two years of preparation, has been completed and now is ready to be taken to the public for an explanation.

Four public meetings are scheduled this week, beginning Monday night, to present the Master Plan to citizens interested in learning about the blueprint that will guide the growth of their city.

The meetings are scheduled as follows:

1. Monday, 7:30 p.m., Lexington Elementary School.

2. Tuesday, 7:30 p.m., Jefferson Junior High School.

3. Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., Carroll High School.

Russell Links Rights Fight To 'Circus' Veteran Demo Accuses Senate Of Unfairness

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Richard B. Russell asserted Saturday the forthcoming showdown effort to pass a Senate civil rights bill has "the air of a political carnival or a Roman circus."

The veteran Georgia Democrat, unofficial leader of the Senate's Southern bloc which will fight the move, also accused his party's Senate leadership of not observing "the procedures ordinarily followed to insure a fair chance for all members of the Senate to be advised as to legislation."

Russell pointed out in a statement that the leadership has not said what bill will be brought up as a vehicle for carrying the civil rights legislation and that no civil rights bill as such is on the Senate calendar.

By long standing agreement among leaders of both parties, the entire civil rights issue will officially be brought up Monday.

However, little action is expected in the first day's skirmishing and Capitol oldtimers predict the Senate will be tied up for weeks before the issue is finally settled.

The actual fight officially may center around a minor House-approved bill to provide a 100th anniversary celebration of the founding of land grant colleges.

Leaders were planning to offer it as the Senate's pending business and let the battle rage on attempts to amend it with a variety of civil rights riders.

Russell would not reveal the Southern's strategy, but in his statement he said "we shall utilize every means at our command."

New Delhi Visit Of Khrushchev Nearing End

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev flies to east central India Sunday at the end of a three-day visit to New Delhi that so far apparently has been unfruitful.

Showing a little more bounce than he had in his first two days, the Premier toured a 30,000-acre, Soviet-equipped farm at Suratgarh, 200 miles northwest of New Delhi. He told the farmers they did not know how to harvest mustard.

Visit

He spent an hour Saturday visiting an exhibit of mystic impressionist paintings by Svetoslav Roerich, whose parents fled the Soviet revolution 40 years ago. Khrushchev talked animatedly with Roerich and praised his work although he himself is an advocate of "Socialist realism."

But throughout most of his visit Khrushchev has lacked the sparkle and bounce he often has shown. He has cracked flow jokes and refrained from the flamboyant

Gun Accident Kills Area Girl

ANSLLEY (Special) — Thirteen-year-old Beverly Ann Haynes was fatally injured in a shooting accident at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Unice Hawkins, yesterday when a gun held by her brother discharged.

The accident occurred when a gun, held by her brother, David Wayne, was discharged around 12:20 p.m., shortly after he had come in from a hunting trip.

Dr. Ernest Blumie, Jackson parish coroner, ruled the death accidental. He gave this account: He said that the boy, thinking that the 22 rifle was unloaded, pointed it at his sister who was confined to bed with flu, and fired it.

Besides her brother and grandmother, the victim's only survivors are her mother, Mrs. Dorothy Litton, Oakland, Calif.

The body was taken to Kilpatrick Funeral Home in Ruston where funeral arrangements were pending last night.

Two Railroad Officials Die As Cable Hits

ABERNATHY, Tex. (AP)—One end of a broken cable whipped through the air and killed two railroad officials Saturday as they watched workmen clear wrecked cars of a derailed freight train.

The accident occurred nearly 12 hours after 37 cars and a diesel unit of the Santa Fe train smashed together in a jumbled heap early Saturday morning.

Thomas J. Anderson, 57, assistant general manager for the Santa Fe at Amarillo, Tex., died almost instantly.

Fred Ernest Andrick, 52, general car foreman for the railroad at Amarillo, died a short time later at a hospital in Lubbock, 15 miles south of here.

WORKMEN

Workmen using a truck which was pulling an empty tank car from atop the heap, a railroad spokesman said, when the car toppled and snapped a telephone pole. The falling pole snapped a cable, which lashed out and hit both men some distance from the wreckage.

There were no injuries to workmen at the scene, nor in the early morning train wreck six miles north of Abernathy.

Mystery Sub Number Two Is Reported

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI)—Argentine Naval and Air Forces have trapped a second mystery submarine—this one apparently undamaged—in the Bay of Golfo Nuevo, the Naval Ministry announced Saturday.

The announcement coincided with the arrival of two U.S. Navy planes loaded with modern anti-submarine equipment destined to bring the mystery ships to the surface or "kill" them.

The Argentine Navy was racing against an approaching storm, whipping up the coast from the Straits of Magellan, which might give the subs a chance to escape.

CONFIRMS

The Naval Ministry confirmed previous reports that a second submarine had sneaked into the 104-by-20 mile bay on Argentina's Patagonian coast.

It said one of the subs was "apparently damaged" but the other appeared to be operating normally.

Naval and Naval Air Operations in the area of Golfo Nuevo are continuing," the communiqué said.

The U. S. Naval planes brought in a new supply of depth charges, sonar, buoys, flares and other modern anti-submarine equipment which Argentina purchased to bolster its outmoded equipment.

The district's heaviest snowfall in 10 years was driven into steady retreat from roads and bridges yesterday under the bombardment of sunny skies.

VALENTINE'S DAY Several Saints Confuse History

ROME (AP)—Rome has a reputation has not been followed for centuries.

Not one but two St. Valentines figured in its history.

So Sunday, Valentine's Day, should really be something in Roman history.

It isn't.

A few stores have carried half-hearted advertisements about "Valentine's day."

But ask any Roman couple remains of both saints, except for strolling arm in arm or hand-holding what the day is, and the answer probably will be: "Sunday."

A skull of one of the St. Valentines is kept in Santa Maria in Cosmedin, one of Rome's oldest churches. The skull used to be displayed on Feb. 14, when a crown in Africa but that little is known of roses was put on it. This custom of him

17-Year Mystery Updated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The desolate sands of a North African desert have yielded up the bodies of five members of the Lady Be Good bomber crew after nearly 17 years.

Their four buddies may lie buried somewhere nearby in the shifting sand dunes of the Libyan Desert.

The Air Force announced Saturday an oil exploration party found the bodies of five members of the crew that failed to return from a World War II bombing mission over Italy on April 4, 1943.

They lay about 75 miles from the spot where the Lady Be Good's almost intact frame was discovered by chance 10 months ago.

SEARCH

For weeks after the finding of the bomber, an intensive air and surface search was conducted for the crew that failed to return from a World War II bombing mission over Italy on April 4, 1943.

Clustered near the bodies of the five were pieces of equipment they had used in their effort to walk out of the desert — canteens, flashlights, pieces of parachute silk and harness, furled flight jackets.

Individual identification of the bodies was awaiting results of analyses by an Army mortuary team. But one bit of equipment may have given a clue to the identity of one of the five men.

This was a sun glasses case bearing the name of Lt. D. P. Hays. He was the navigator aboard the bomber. His home was Lee's Summit, Mo.

Bloody Hermit Enters Mickey Case At LSU

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The defense for Dr. George H. Mickey Saturday came up with what it called a blood-spattered second man who may figure in the slaying of an unmarried woman biology professor.

The mystery man was described as a typical old hermit driving a 10-year-old car with Florida license plates. The defense said a dog was in his car.

Atty. Robert L. Klempeter and W. P. Wray said the man was seen by three persons at an Airline Highway service station. He asked directions to New Orleans.

DEFENSE

The defense said the man was seen by Gerald Miller, owner of Capitol Conoco Station on Airline Highway; Miller's father, Herbert Miller; and John Late Wall, a nearby resident.

The men told the attorneys a man driving an old model car stopped at the station between 6 and 7 a.m., Jan. 10 — the day Dr. Margaret Rosemond McMillan, 38, was found clubbed to death six miles south of the Louisiana State University campus here.

The service station is some distance across Baton Rouge from the campus area.

Dr. Mickey, 50, has been held in East Baton Rouge Parish jail here since Jan. 14 charged with murder of Dr. McMillan.

Dr. McDonald Dies; Service Is Scheduled

Dr. McDonald, 72, died Sunday afternoon at his home here after a brief illness.

Dr. McDonald, a prominent citizen of Jonesboro, had been a long-time resident here for many years until he retired last June. He was a charter member of the Jonesboro Lions Club, and a member of the American Legion.

Divided in various parts, the Master Plan was drafted to establish standards by which the city will follow in future years. City officials see the Master Plan as a "necessity" in view of growth in population.

The population growth brings on additional problems, like traffic, for instance, and the Master Plan is designed merely to help solve or curtail problems like that.

Mans and drawings will be on display at the public hearings to explain all this in detail. Citizens attending the hearings will have a chance to ask questions.

In brief, the Master Plan is divided into the following sections:

1. Neighborhood, 2. Major Street Plan, 3. Communities and Neighborhoods Plan, 4. Parks, Recreation and School Sites Plan, 5. Rehabilitation and Redevelopment Plan, 6. Illustrative Redevelopment Plan, 7. General Use Plan, 8. Transportation Plan.

Hennings Jr. (D-Mo.) called a meeting of the Senate Rules Committee for next Wednesday in hopes of getting a vote on voting-rights legislation. Hennings was drafting his own bill to combine a Civil Rights Commission recommendation for a system of federal voting registrars and the administration's federal court referee plan.

The committee has held hearings on both, and any legislation it approves could be offered as a floor amendment in the Senate.

Hennings said his bill would set up a system of "federal enrollment officers." Although he did not reveal details, he said the bill would ensure "that those voters enrolled to vote under its provisions would be guaranteed the right to cast their ballots while preserving the rights of the states to control the validity of the ballots until after the vote had been cast."

out antics that so often mark his tours.

Khrushchev's manner led some observers to speculate that he is disappointed by the turnout of the crowds, which were little more than a fraction of those that applauded President Eisenhower last December.

Others theorized that Khrushchev is depressed by the deadlock between India and Red China over 50,000 disputed square miles on their frontiers. Many Indians have hoped Khrushchev might find a way out of the bitter quarrel.

The Premier never once mentioned Red China publicly, although no one doubts he and Nehru discussed the border issue at length. Some Indians have predicted that Khrushchev at least would persuade Nehru to meet with Premier Chou En-lai of Red China. But there has been nothing to indicate the border issue has been changed in any way.

Even as Khrushchev prepared to leave New Delhi, new reports of a Red Chinese military buildup on the Himalayan frontier arrived from usually reliable sources in the border city of Darjeeling.

These sources said large detachments of Communist Chinese troops are stationed only 20 miles north of the border of Bhutan and large supplies of arms and ammunition have reached Red Chinese forces in the passes leading to Sikkim. Both these border states lie under India's protection.

While there was little to indicate the first phase of his four-nation Asian tour is a success.

In San Francisco, George T. Davis, an attorney for Chessman, said both he and his client were "disturbed by the impetuosity" of Wirt's action. He said Wirt had been instructed to clear all legal moves with him.

According to Davis, there were "several legal doors" open to Chessman, including two new appeals to the Supreme Court. These would depend on the action of the appeals court on Chessman's request that Chambers be overruled.

The oil company men, apparently in moving about the vast, empty desert in their work, came upon the bodies and last encampment of the five on Thursday.

A commercial pilot who operates planes in the desert radioed word of the finding to Wheeler Air Force Base, near Tripoli, a U.S. Air Force party flew to the scene and reported back that these definitely were crew members of the long-missing bomber.

In the party from Wheeler was a chaplain. The little group of Air Force people and the oil exploration party stood by as the chaplain offered a prayer for these long-missing men of a now distant war.

The bodies were left at the scene until the experts of the Army mortuary team, coming down from Frankfurt, Germany, could arrive.

Discovery in recent years of planes lost in various World War II theaters has not been unusual. But the case of the Lady Be Good presented a deep mystery after it was found. The bomber, untouched by the years in the dry desert air stood as it had been when the crew left it.

Where did the men go? The search centered first on the immediate area. Bit of equipment suggested that the men had marched away after waiting for a time to be found. But the trail vanished. The search by ground and air teams was widened. Still, no trace was found.

Not until Thursday, that is, when chance took the oil exploration crew to the spot, where the bodies were found.

The members of the Lady Be Good crew, in addition to Hays, were:

ments ranged from eight to 11 inches.

Snowfall in Monroe was gauged at eight inches.

Weather conditions were credited with contributing to a highway fatality in south Louisiana Saturday and made highways in that area hazardous.

The Mississippi River bridge at Vidalia, closed Friday afternoon to all traffic because of icing conditions, and reopened two hours later on a go-at-your-own-risk basis, was opened to all traffic shortly after 9 a.m. Saturday.

The closing order on the bridge was eased Friday evening after relatives tried to take 47-year-old Layman F. Patterson through a snowstorm to a Natchez, Miss., hospital for Vidalia, La., where he had been visiting.

His car was held up 45 minutes at the temporarily closed bridge, and he died of a heart attack.

J. D. Richardson, 40, said he and the victim of the heart attack had been horseback riding when Patterson complained of pains in the chest. Snow depth in the Vidalia area was estimated at around eight to 10 inches.

Ten inches of snow on a carport roof at Wimbush caused in the structure around mid-morning Saturday at the home of Mrs. Lattie Etheridge as she was in the yard taking pictures of wintry scenes. The family car was damaged by the cave-in but no one was injured.

Weather conditions also were responsible for postponement of the Louisiana Tech-Southeastern Louisiana basketball game scheduled at Ruston Saturday night.

Monroe and Many reported eight inches of snow from mid-afternoon Friday until early Saturday morning. Eunice had five inches, Lake Charles, five, and Crowley, five.

Although people generally were considered as enduring the most hardships from the snowy weather, this was not entirely the case in northeastern Louisiana deer country where Banbi and her kind shivered in the cold and pawed for food.

The chairman of the State Wildlife and Fisheries Commission ordered men and tools into the area.

"In addition to transferring game agents and biologists," said E. R. McDonald, of Newellton, "we are going to use planes, jeeps and boats to see that our wildlife is protected against weather as well as illegal hunters." "And, we're going to see that violators suffer the heaviest penalties we can find on our law books."

A look at district weather conditions Saturday evening brought this report:

Delhi, snow stopped around 1 a.m. Saturday, then resumed for a short while about 7 a.m. Snow depth was around eight to 10 inches. Roads began clearing around noon under sunny skies.

Lake Providence, snow stopped around noon after depths ranging from six to 11 inches in various sections of the parish had fallen. Roads were clear as snows melted rapidly on main thoroughfares. No major accidents were reported.

Ruston, three to four inches of snow began disappearing rapidly early Saturday. Lowest overnight temperature there was 29 degrees. Some cars slipped off icy roads early in the day and had to be towed back, but no major accidents were reported.

Bastrop, snowfall halted early Saturday, weather was cold and clear. Bridges and roads were open. Snowfall was measured at eight inches.

Rayville, where a snow blanket of four inches covered roads, traffic lanes were cleared with graders. Low temperature for overnight was 29.

Union parish area, snow fall was short, lasting only a few minutes in most places, and melted rapidly. A low of 32 was recorded. There were no major weather-caused accidents.

The white storm brewed in the collision of a low pressure area and a cold front, made a deep south penetration. Even New Orleans, often proof against snow that pelts the rest of the state, awakened Saturday to a fluffy cloud of the trimming. It melted as it hit mostly.

This was the first snow in New Orleans since Feb. 12, 1953. That time there was an inch, heaviest in a century.

Snow on the ground in Louisiana ranged up to 11 inches, with only a trace recorded in some areas. The storm extended from the extreme southeastern corner of Texas, across most of the interior of Louisiana and Mississippi, and into Tennessee and the northern portion of Alabama.

In Central Louisiana around Alexandria, snow covering was reported at nine inches. At Baton Rouge state police asked motorists to stay off the highways north and west of the state capital. Every small bridge glistened under an ice coating.

By mid-morning Saturday the arching bridge over the Atchafalaya river at Krotz Springs had been cleared and reopened to limited traffic.

And, as expected, children around the state had a ball of the snow variety. Snow pellets flew fast and free, and snowmen of many sizes and shapes came into being. Newspapers were flooded with calls from persons wanting pictures taken of various icy creations — snowmen and women ranging up to heights of 10 feet, and other curiosities.

Some persons went sledding, some slide down river levee banks along the Ouachita, using tin and cardboard instead of the conventional sleds.

Photographers also had a field day, and the big snow storm of 1960 probably will find a resting place in albums around the northeast district for many years to come.

The Louisiana weather outlook for today is for clear skies and a warming trend.

Past Decade Has Been Era Of The Violent Fear

EDITOR'S NOTE — Is there a way out of the nuclear balance of terror? Yes, says Thomas E. Murray, former member of the Atomic Energy Commission—through a bold new approach involving the construction of hydrogen bombs in U.S. and Soviet stockpiles. In the following article, Murray, consultant to the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, explains his dramatic proposal and tells how it would work.

By THOMAS E. MURRAY
Former Member
Atomic Energy Commission
Written for The Associated Press

The past decade has been the era of terror because over it has hung the threat of violence—uncontrolled, unlimited, both politically and morally absurd.

Our immediate and urgent purpose, therefore, must be to effect an orderly dismantling of the era of terror by dissipating the threat of unlimited violence.

An agreement with the Soviet Union to stop the perilous and irrational effort to maintain the balance of terror would be as much in the Communist interest as in our own. So it appears possible and practical.

When I propose the orderly destruction, on a matching basis, of existing hydrogen bombs—megaton weapons—in the U.S. and Soviet stockpiles under international supervision, one megaton is the equivalent to one million tons of high explosives.

Given the nature of man, international politics cannot dispense with the use of force or at least the threat of force any more than human society can dispense with law, which requires force to back it up.

On the other hand, international politics perishes as an art if power is allowed to suffer moral degradation and become mere violence, which is destructive of the very idea of force and of law too.

But our present disarmament policy is mistaken in its basic premise. We should never have yielded to Communist pressure and put the subordinate issue of nuclear tests in the first place on the disarmament agenda.

The past decade has not been the era of terror because it has been an era of tests. The recent moratorium on tests has done nothing to banish the threat of violence.

So the real and immediate problem is not to halt future weapons development by stopping tests—but to banish the present menace of unlimited destruction that is posed by megaton weapons already in American and Soviet stockpiles.

It is the sheer existence of these stockpiles that has created its own strategy—that of the war of annihilation. And until we negotiate an agreement to extinguish the threat of worldwide nuclear holocaust, all other kinds of disarmament negotiations will be certainly futile and no less certainly dangerous.

It follows in all logic that the era of terror will not be dismantled until these megaton stockpiles are themselves dismantled. This is the immediate issue presented for political decision. The decision does not fall to the strategist or the technologist.

I should like, first, to present in general outline the form that this political decision should take and then construct the argument, pro and con.

My proposal has two parts. First, that an international agency be constituted and located on neutral territory and empowered to supervise the systematic destruction of the megaton weapons in the American and Soviet stockpiles. Second, that the destruction be done on a matching basis, weapon for weapon.

The United States will hand over to the international agency one megaton weapon, beginning in the highest range, the Soviet Union in turn will hand over one weapon of the same size.

The hardware of the weapon will then be destroyed in square public fashion. Their content of highly enriched fissionable material will be put at the disposal of the appropriate international authority for peaceful uses.

The process will continue until its political purpose—the end to the era of terror and the threat of unlimited violence—has been achieved.

An essential question concerns the method by which this proposal should be carried out. The dismantling process should take place in stages. The first stage is an important one. Enough megatonate should be destroyed in it to affirm emphatically and at the outset a mutual seriousness of intent.

What would constitute such a quantity of megatonate? The immediate answer to this question may be reached by asking another: How many megatons would be sufficient to create it exploded, a serious threat to civilization?

All experts agree that there is a limit to the amount of fissionable material that may be explosively released without creating this serious threat, both in terms of immediate destruction of life and property and also in terms of future radioactive fallout. Within this basic agreement there will doubtless be differences of opinion on the arithmetic. However, it will be most important not to let a straight-forward answer to a straight-forward question get lost amid the endless niceties of scientific argument.

I once made an estimate myself when I was a member of the Atomic Energy Commission. My figure was 3,500 megatons. The figure was not challenged either at the time (1957) or subsequently. An amount of 3,500 megatons might well serve as the basis of the initial dismantling stage which would cover about three years. The United States and Soviet Russia would agree to hand over 1,750 megatons each to the international agency. It would be desirable for the United States to offer a substantial portion of its total share in the initial exchange—let's say 500 megatons—as its first commitment, to be matched by the Soviet Union.

It should be further agreed that the remaining 2,500 megatons will be delivered to the international agency in matching lots at pre-specified intervals within the three-year period. By that time it is to be hoped that the international climate will have been so improved that negotiations of other disarmament measures will have become possible.

What are the arguments in favor of this proposal?

1. It takes far more realistic account of the needs of American security than does current U.S. disarmament policy. Our present policy calls for nuclear disarmament, first, by the cessation of all nuclear tests; second, by the stoppage of the flow of fissionable material into weapons; and third, by the total destruction of all existing nuclear stockpiles.

This policy clearly illustrates our fatal habit of divorcing political and military policies. For political reasons we declared a moratorium on all tests, despite the fact that military reasons demanded certain kinds of tests.

These tests would develop what I have called the third generation of weapons. They would be carried out underground and give us new types of much-needed limited weapons, defensive and offensive, which could be used in discriminating fashion.

Moreover, the other parts of the proposal, if carried out, would be fatal to any rational concept of American military strength. The program would strip us not only of the capacity for unlimited and useless nuclear violence, but also of the most useful and necessary capacity to use limited nuclear force.

It is true that the carrying out of our present program was made contingent on the establishment of international inspection and controls. However, in the matter of tests it is clear to informed people that an adequate and effective inspection system, which would detect tests even down to five or ten kilotons, is for the present not a definite scientific possibility.

It is also, for the foreseeable future, a political impossibility. An adequate and effective inspection system would have to consist of thousands of stations, equipped with devices not yet invented. This is the scientific problem. Many hundreds of these stations would have to be on Soviet and Red Chinese territory; this is the political impossibility.

Moreover, the stoppage of all nuclear production and the total destruction of existing stockpiles stand even farther beyond the possibility of control, for scientific and political reasons.

2. The new proposal goes to the heart of the issue. It is the sinister stockpiles of megaton weapons, and the strategies of annihilation built on them, which give off the fumes of terror that today are poisoning the international atmosphere. The terror has to be attacked at its source, which is the balancing power of the United States and the Soviet Union to wreck the fabric of civilization in a matter of hours.

3. It should be possible to negotiate such an agreement between ourselves and the Soviet Union because the single indispensable condition exists—the common and coincident self-interest of both parties. No national interest, Russian or American, is served by maintaining and increasing a stockpile of weapons of violence that are utterly useless for any political purpose, Russian or American.

The proposal is practical for another reason. It avoids the stone wall into which other American proposals have always run. This is the Soviet concept of absolute national sovereignty which forbids honest and effective inspection of Soviet territory. The proposal I am discussing does not call for inspection of Soviet territory.

4. The proposal will inevitably find favor in the court of world opinion. This is what the nations really want—that the United States should take the lead in bringing them out from under the shadow of possible annihilation. The Soviet Union could not refuse to follow this lead without incurring the political punishment of disfavor of the nations. And by making this proposal the United States would finally assume the initiative in the problem of disarmament.

5. If megaton means of wreaking violence were gradually to be destroyed by mutual agreement, the threat of violence would cease to be of use as an instrument of international politics. Nuclear blackmail would be at an end.

6. The essential distinction between the cold war and the era of terror would begin to be realized. The cold war began before the era of terror set in; it will continue after the terror is ended. Basically, the cold war is a crisis in civilization. The contest is between opposed conceptions of the nature of man, his role in history, and his relation to the state.

This ideological conflict has carried over into the field of politics; its economic dimension is continually growing. During the era of terror it has also acquired a military dimension of altogether swollen proportions. Until this military dimension is cut down to proper size, the real issues of the cold war will be obscured.

7. A most salutary effect would be produced on American strategic thought. At least since 1953 it has stood under the hypnotic influence of megaton technology. Its focus has been fixed on the strategy of annihilation. The concept of massive retaliation has held it in deadly thrall. The spell can only be broken by the political decision to enforce the primacy of politics and to begin an orderly surrender of weapons that are politically useless.

8. A step would be taken toward the positive goal of American disarmament policy. That distant goal, still far over the horizon of the future, is the gradual transfer of the right to use arms and to produce nuclear arms, to some kind of international authority.

9. A considerable amount of highly enriched fissionable material would become available, presumably to the International Atomic Energy Agency, for peaceful purposes, particularly for the development of industrial nuclear power. This would give a tremendous and badly needed impulse to the whole program of atoms for peace.

Here then are the reasons in favor of the proposal. What are the reasons against it? They are only two.

First, it will be said that an agreement to match the Soviet Union in the destruction of weapons of violence would impair America's military strength.

This objection rests on a false concept of strength. I do not consider it strength on our part to consent to the current degradation of force into unlimited violence. On the contrary, it is weakness. Surely it is moral weakness. It is also political weakness. It is a failure of the political intelligence to see the absurdity of violence, and to see also the rational necessity of force for the purposes of politics.

It is becoming apparent today that we have been pursuing an illusion of strength along a dead-end road, the same dead-end road into which technology turned military doctrine in 1953, when the hydrogen bomb assumed control of strategy.

Since that day our nuclear superiority has been lost. A balance of nuclear power has been established. In this new situation the strategy of ultimate deterrence plus massive retaliation and megaton stockpile which supports this strategy have lost whatever value, military or political, they may have had in the day of our nuclear superiority.

The second objection raises the ultimate question: Would the proposed action invite massive Soviet aggression and open the United States to defeat and destruction? Would not the Soviet Union cheat on the agreement in order to gain nuclear superiority in megaton weapons, and then would it not, at some given moment, launch a total attack on the United States?

This possibility cannot be absolutely excluded. Here is the irreducible risk. Risk, however, must always be calculated. And on any fair calculation the risk involved in my proposal is minimal. Certainly it is far less serious than the risk involved in the present American disarmament proposal.

Rites For 3 Are Delayed By Weather

FERRIDAY (Special) — Heavy snowfall and frigid weather were delaying definite funeral arrangements for the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Minor H. "Smiley" Burnett: Catherine, 13, Hazel, 8, and Debra Ann, 3 months, burned beyond recognition in an early morning flash fire which destroyed the Burnett home Friday.

Meanwhile, the parents, hospitalized at the Concordia General Hospital here were both reported as improved, according to Dr. Herman Gibson Jr. He said that Burnett, a paper mill employee, was "out of shock" and much better and Mrs. Burnett, whose burns were relatively minor, was showing much improvement. Barring complications, he said, both would be on the road to recovery in a day or so. Another son, Henry, 11, remains at the hospital with his parents.

He suffered shock. The Burnetts were able to receive some visitors Saturday.

Generous-hearted citizens of Ferriday, Vidalia, Natchez and surrounding communities, hearing of the tragedy which struck the Burnett family, were taking up a collection. More than two thousand dollars has already been raised here and at the International Paper Company, Natchez, mill, where Burnett worked since 1959. He came there from Bastrop.

Tourist court, hotel, rooming and boarding house owners, have assured the Burnett family of free rooms and meals for as long as they wish when the couple and their young son can be moved from the hospital. Other merchants and businessmen have promised to assist them.

The family has a cemetery lot in Alexandria, La., and Young's Funeral home of Ferriday, which is in charge of arrangements, said interment will take place there, but no time has been set as yet for the triple rites.

William Godfrey Dies; Services Are Scheduled

William Edward Godfrey, 93, Columbia resident, died Saturday morning in the St. Joseph's Home for the Aged. Funeral services will be held in the First Methodist Church in Columbia 3 p.m. Monday, with the Rev. Sidney Seegers officiating. Interment will be in Columbia Cemetery under the direction of the Riser Funeral Home. The body will lie in state at the Mulhearn Funeral Home in Monroe until 10 a.m. Monday.

Mr. Godfrey is survived by his widow, Mrs. Maise Godfrey, Monroe; two sons, John Edward Godfrey, Monroe; Malcolm Godfrey, Pompano, Beach, Florida; and four grandchildren.

He was a member of the First Methodist Church in Columbia, a mason, he was one of the founders of the Caldwell Bank. He was serving as chairman of the board and was in the mercantile business in Columbia for many years. He was born in East Feliciana Parish, but had lived in Caldwell Parish for most of his life. He and his wife had celebrated their 68th wedding anniversary last year.

Pallbearers will be G. E. Eskine, C. C. Minard, Hardy Fisher, Russell Cummings, Archie Bridger, J. H. McQuarry, Jim Sherman, J. J. McKeithen, David Gartman, Bobby Joe Lee.

Public Retirement Due For Studying

BATON ROUGE (AP) — While there is only a faint hint in the air today, the 1960 Legislature may take a new and sharper look at the growing, multi-million-dollar weight of public retirement operations.

The 1959 fiscal Legislature received a package program after long study of several big retirement systems, designed to save 4½ million dollars worth without hurting anyone.

But that economical approach was shattered in the legislative rush to spend after the impact of that record 59-million-dollar oil windfall in February, 1959.

No details can be provided at this time. But a surprising approach is being considered, different from anything previously.

With state budgets climbing as rapidly as ever, with the state this year spending more than 50 million dollars above revenues, something is bound to happen for the budget to be balanced in the coming fiscal year. And no one is talking about new taxes.

A legislative study committee tried hard early last year to find ways of saving money in the retirement systems without hurting benefits. But the plan blew up in the Legislature.

Many groups, public and private, in the last two or three years, have suggested ways and means of holding back the tremendous surge in state spending. Nothing was ever done about these various ideas.

Gov. Earl K. Long's own committee of legislators, businessmen and labor leaders, studying fiscal problems of education, called for three major steps, in addition to the more widely publicized recommendation for re-enactment of the 2.3-cent gas severance tax expiring in August this year.

These other three steps were: Equalizing parish property assessments "at a more reasonable level than the present average." Nothing ever happened in the Long Legislature — or anywhere else.

Making fuller use of local taxing authority.

Providing a constitutional proposal, to be submitted to a popular vote, asking the people them-selves to express their opinion on the state's continued subsidy of the expensive school lunch program. The State Board of Education approved nearly 16½ million dollars for school lunches in the coming fiscal year, up two million.

Back midway in the Long administration, when Long's legislative leaders were trying to find money, these top leaders frequently discussed, without acting on, two possibilities: (1) eliminating most levee boards and drainage districts, centralizing this function in the State Department of Public Works, at a saving of several million dollars a year, and (2) knocking out some of the tax exemptions in major taxes.

And Gov. Long's own legislative budget committee talked strongly about doing something to erase the overlapping of state functions. Again, nothing happened in the Legislature.

The Public Affairs Research Council, private research group which tries to help promote economy and sound financing, once suggested the state was topheavy with tax collections and needed to shift some of the burden to local governments.

PAR frequently has suggested careful consolidation of smaller schools, bringing greater educational opportunity at less cost in larger, more centralized schools.

The State Board of Education not too many months ago made a close examination of mounting expenses in the school bus operations. A school superintendent's committee surveyed the question and told the board there was some need to streamlining the operation which one member branded a haven for political patronage.

In Louisiana, 85 per cent of all state tax collections are dedicated, which means the Legislature can't direct what to do with the money.

"The extensiveness of dedicated taxes has weakened the Legislature's power of appropriate-

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John XXIII yesterday named Msgr. Errado Bafile, an Italian in the Vatican's diplomatic service, apostolic nuncio to West Germany.

The new nuncio succeeds Aloisius Cardinal Muench, former bishop of Fargo, N.D., who was elevated to the College of Cardinals last year.

"PAR said, 'this power of the purse has shifted to the governor.'"

Critics of dedicated taxes — assigned to only one or two purposes — point out again and again this means some state agency has more than it needs to spend while others starve.

Another economy note, the forgotten man committee, headed by former Gov. Sam Jones, emphasized this point:

Spending a little now to rehabilitate prisoners will help keep down spending a lot more for a growing prison population.

Jack Paar Admits He's 'Confused'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Paar returned to the National Broadcasting Company Saturday, but only long enough to announce that he meant it when he said he was through with his nightly television show.

"I'm so confused I don't know what the Hell I want," Paar told newsmen. "I may have a solution when I come back from a brief vacation with my wife."

"It will be many weeks before I am seen in any form on television."

Paar took a vacation from his troubles Saturday afternoon by going to a Broadway theater with his daughter. Then he made an announced appearance at the NBC headquarters, where he talked to reporters in a broadcasting studio.

He said that he wanted to continue with the network, with which he has a contract running until 1962, at a reported $500,000 a year. But, he firmly declared:

"I do not want to do the 'Tonight Show.'"

When Paar began appearing on the show in 1957, it was called the "Tonight Show." Later it was changed to the "Jack Paar Show." It runs from 11:15 to 1 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Paar walked out of a taping session for the Thursday night show a few hours before it went on the air. He burst out of the studio in tears of rage because his program the night before had been censored.

An NBC official deleted nearly five minutes of the Wednesday night show, eliminating a joke Paar had told about a water closet.

Paar had been in seclusion in his 12-room suburban Bronxville home until he went to the matinee performance of "The Miracle Workers," a play about Helen Keller.

Then he held an hour-long news conference during which he nervously rubbed his forehead, toyed with a book of matches and continually lighted and re-lighted his pipe, which he put down every few minutes.

Paar sat on a stage surrounded by newsmen, TV officials and photographers in a studio across the hall from the studio in which he regularly has prepared his nightly show.

He said he received a letter Friday from Robert Sarnoff, NBC board chairman, and Robert Kintner, network president, stating they were sorry that the incident had happened as it had and asking him to meet them at 14 blocks of a metropolitan American city.

Paar said Sarnoff and Kintner were "very nice men...very persuasive."

MEETING

The regular meeting of Swami-Santha No. 102, Nomads of Avru-daka, will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in Castle Hall 127½ St. John St.

The Palais de la Defense in Paris is the world's largest exhibition hall. It would cover about 14 blocks of a metropolitan American city.

Team Notes Red Outlook On Alliance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Columbia-Harvard research team said Saturday the Soviet Union is paying far more attention to West European government and business leaders than to the masses in its drive to smash the Atlantic alliance.

In a special study drafted for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the group said this marks "an important shift in Soviet short-term policies which is still not sufficiently appreciated in the West."

The Kremlin objective now, said the study, is not to communize European nations by working with the masses but to force government leaders to modify policies.

"This means changes that will have the effect of weakening the Western alliance," the study said. "Later, it may be hoped to encourage these governments to orient their policies more favorably for the Soviet Union and to make their industrial output available to the Soviet economic complex."

"It can be seen therefore why the 'proletariat' of the West seems to be of less current interest to the Soviet Union than the 'bourgeoisie.'"

The report was prepared by a group of professors and researchers as part of a far-reaching study of foreign policy problems.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said in releasing it that while the study does not necessarily reflect the views of any committee members, it points out that "we must continue to look a few hard, unpleasant facts in the face" and not try to wish them away.

The study, directed by Henry L. Roberts of Columbia University, said mobilization of all of this country's military and economic resources will be required to meet the Soviet threat.

"This will require sacrifices and changes in our accustomed way of life, to a degree we have not been accustomed to appreciate," the researchers said. "We cannot expect that these changes will be welcome or popular. The most we can hope is that the American people, when the necessities are properly explained, will understand that the price of failing to respond would be infinitely greater."

Fulbright said it is nonsense to say the country cannot afford the cost. He also said that "we do not have much time left to shed our indifference" if the United States is to remain free.

"This much seems clear," he said. "If we are to insure that the threat or use of force will not become a decisive element in this conflict, it is essential that a serious imbalance of military capability must not be allowed to develop."

The study said the ultimate question "is whether we can develop a sufficient degree of public understanding to make it possible for our government to do what needs to be done."

EGGHEAD FACTORY

University Has High Objectives

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer
ROCHESTER, Mich. (AP) — Right now Michigan State University-Oakland is just three buildings, a student body of 535 freshmen, a faculty of 25 — and a dream.

The dream is to start right from scratch and build MSU-O into one of the nation's greatest institutions of higher learning.

Even before the first classes opened last fall the goal was clear: They're out to produce eggheads. Not just from the gifted and the brilliant, but from any reasonably able youngster who is willing to work.

MSU-O is a sister, but no twin, of Michigan State University at East Lansing, a pioneer in developing vocational courses in agriculture, applied science and the mechanical arts. It's hard to imagine two members of the same academic family going in such opposite directions.

At MSU-O the emphasis is on learning, not training; on ideas, not techniques.

For nearly a century the trend in American colleges and universities has been away from the humanities, and toward a narrow specialization.

Here at MSU-O they have reversed the trend.

Every student must take at least half his courses in liberal arts. Required of all are: English, literature, history and philosophy of science, and a study of contemporary non-Western cultures, with emphasis on the Far East, Africa and Latin America.

Every student must master — not just study — a foreign language, preferably Russian.

Some students may substitute a sequence in mathematics which begins with calculus, but they are urged to take a language, too.

There are only four fields of study: liberal arts, engineering, science, business administration and teacher education. In each field the emphasis is on depth, not a vast variety of splinter courses on the same subject.

In every course there will be strong emphasis on written work, to develop clear and effective expression.

Perhaps the real key to the MSU-O plan is the freedom given the individual student.

For example, no roll call is taken in class. It is assumed the student is there to learn. If he can do it better outside class than in, the official view is "good for him."

Students are encouraged to do independent study and research, and to work together in small groups.

No other state university, and very few private schools, is so demanding of its students. There is no time for frills. Students are expected to be on the campus from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., and most have four or five hours homework each night. They are urged to work at outside jobs only on weekends.

At the end of the first quarter, just before Christmas, MSU-O officials found they had been too demanding. Forty-three per cent of the students taking calculus, chemistry and economics had flunked. There was also a high rate of failure among students taking political science and French.

"In most cases the instructors were probably at fault," says Loren Pono, assistant to the chancellor. "They were demanding too much, too soon. Perhaps it was a conscious effort to make it tough."

"Many of the students just didn't have the proper background for a tough course in political science. And many of the student shouldn't have been taking those courses at all."

The students who flunked were given a chance to repeat the course and erase their failure. More than two thirds of them did so. Next year the course in economics and political science will be moved up from the freshman to the sophomore level.

"There are no snap courses here," says Chancellor Durward B. Varner. "All of them are tough. But we didn't want this rate of attrition."

Of the original freshman class of 535, only 70 dropped out at the end of the first quarter. This is about 12 per cent, compared to a national average of more than 27 per cent.

To help the subject devote full time to learning, the university has cleared away much of the nonintellectual underbrush.

Social fraternities and sororities are forbidden. There is no ROTC PROGRAM. There will be no intercollegiate athletics, no required physical education.

Another departure from normal state university practice is that there will be no remedial, or "bonehead," courses. Students who need extra work to make up high school deficiencies must get it on their own.

When MSU-O opened its doors last September its approach to higher education was an untried experiment. Much still remains to be proved, but staff and students alike are delighted with the results.

Mary Stewart, 18, who hopes to become a teacher, says "I had no idea of the high caliber of work expected here. But it has been good for me. I know for the first time what a really good education can be."

Mike Deller, also 18 and a prospective teacher, says "It's tough, really tough. But I'm glad because it's going to mean something someday to be able to say you graduated from here."

The professors are enthusiastic. One man took a $5,000 salary cut to teach here.

"This school is not tradition bound. It encourages initiative," says Dr. Gerald Straka, history instructor.

"Everything here makes you want to be a better teacher," says Dr. William Klubach, an assistant professor of history.

Rarely is it given to a man to build a state university from the ground up. MSU Vice President Varner, called on some of the best minds in America to help him when he was named chancellor of the new school.

Three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson offered President J. A. Hannah of Michigan State their 1,800-acre estate, Meadow Brook Farm, 23 miles north of Detroit. The property included a 40-room home and baronial 125-room Meadow Brook Hall, which in 1928 cost 3 1/2 million dollars to build and 6 1/2 million to furnish with art treasures.

With the estate went a gift of two million dollars for construction of a classroom building and a combination laboratory and faculty office building, Oakland County, in which MSU-O is located, financed construction of a $700,000 student center.

Acquisition of additional land has made the campus into 2,100 acres of gently rolling land in the heart of a great industrial complex.

The Wilsons retain life-time use of the buildings on the estate, built by Mrs. Wilson's first husband, the late John Dodge, Detroit automobile pioneer.

Fifty community leaders, including labor officials, corporation executives and educators, were named to the MSU-O Foundation. The foundation brought together 28 leading Americans for a series of panel discussions.

The panelists included Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, president of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Lee Du Bridge, president of California Institute of Technology, publisher Henry R. Luce and anthropologist Margaret Mead.

The panelists were asked just one question: "Given a clean slate, how would you build the ideal university for our age?"

Their views on what should be taught in the ideal university have been incorporated in the curriculum here.

For instance, the deans of five great engineering schools said that many engineers find that the techniques they learned in school are obsolete within months after graduation.

At MSU-O, students in engineering science will get a broad background of mathematics, chemistry and physics and some specialties such as mechanics and electronics. With the heavy schedule in liberal arts, they will be prepared as broadly trained men

PRIZES AWARDED Ad Week Contest Winners Named

Cash prizes totaling $150 will be awarded to three Monroe high school students and three Northeast State College students, winners of the Advertising Week poster contest sponsored by the Advertising Club of Monroe and West Monroe.

Prizes will be savings accounts provided jointly by the Advertising Club and Central Savings Bank and Trust Co.

First prize winner in the high school division is Tish Poe of Ouachita Parish high school who will receive a $50 saving account. The $15 second prize saving account goes to Jimmy Furr of Ouachita Parish high school. Wayne Radar also of Ouachita High will receive the $10 saving account third prize.

In the college division, Vernon Cottrell was the first prize winner. Second and third prize awards go to Phil Oszuck and Donnavae Hughes.

Winning posters will be displayed in the Central Bank DeSard street main office lobby starting Monday. They will be on display in other business firms throughout the Twin Cities for the next several weeks.

In announcing the winners of advertising helps make possible the Advertising Club's first Advertising Week contest, Ad Club President Grady Merriman said, "we were greatly impressed with the fine entries submitted by our high school and college young people. The excellence of all the entries made it extremely difficult to select the winning posters, and we wish to congratulate everyone who submitted an entry."

John A. Rudisill, vice president of Central Bank, in commenting upon the winning posters said, "The young people who submitted entries in the Ad Club contest have shown by their handiwork that they understand the importance of advertising in the American free enterprise economy, how it helps reduce the selling cost of merchandise, makes possible mass distribution and mass production, and contributes greatly to the high standard of living enjoyed in America."

Theme of the poster contest was "Advertising Helps You Enjoy the Good Life." The same theme will be carried out in the Advertising Week observance in the Twin Cities being sponsored by the Advertising Club, February 14-20.

This is the first time Advertising Week has been observed in the Twin Cities, but Merriman said the event will be sponsored by the Advertising Club each year "to call to the attention of the public the importance of advertising in our daily lives and how advertising helps make possible the American way of life."

Back Nixon, Sen. Scott

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Pennsylvania Republican organization came out Saturday for Vice President Nixon and Sen. Hugh Scott of this state for top places on the GOP ticket in November.

The endorsements came as a surprise at the 113-member state committee meeting to name 10 delegates-at-large to the party's presidential nominating convention this summer.

Although the organization was known to favor Nixon, the outright endorsement had not been expected. As for Scott, he shot a startled look at the chairman of the resolutions committee as the endorsement was read.

The resolution recommended that all 70 Pennsylvania delegates to the Chicago convention work for a Nixon-Scott ticket.

Whether Nixon's name will be entered in the April 26 primary is uncertain. A member of the executive committee said it had been discussed, but that it was not sure what Nixon himself wants.

Saturday's resolution, adopted unanimously, does not pledge the delegates irrevocably to any candidate. Even the results of the presidential preferential primary would not be binding upon them. The primary, therefore, is regarded as being in the nature of a popularity contest.

The resolution asserted that a top team of Nixon and Scott would meet America's need for "continued White House leadership which is dedicated to fair principles and is pledged to continue with courage the intelligent and unselfish action which has brought peace with honor and prosperity to our nation."

Scott, is a former Republican national chairman, and a veteran member of the House. He was elected to the Senate in 1958, the lone Republican victor in a statewide Democratic sweep.

The meeting also endorsed a statewide ticket headed by Charles C. Smith, of Philadelphia; Robert F. Kent, of Meadville; and Judge Blair F. Gunther, of Pittsburgh.

Smith, auditor general, will run for treasurer. The past now held by Kent. Kent will go after the auditor general's place. Under state law, no man may serve successive terms in these offices. Judge Gunther will seek another 10-year term on the Superior Court. He was beaten by a Democrat, Judge Michael Eagan, for a State Supreme Court post last fall.

Lucky Amateur Buys $4,000 Painting For $32

By NORMA GAUIN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—A young actor, stranded by plane trouble in a small Oklahoma town, wandered into an antique shop. High on the wall in a dark corner he spotted a seascape in an elaborate gold frame.
The actor, a former art student, thought he recognized the work of American artist Winslow Homer. He asked the price—$45. The actor had only $42. He persuaded the dealer to sell the painting, minus the frame, for $32.
Then he shipped his acquisition back east. There it was authenticated as a genuine Winslow Homer worth $4,000 to $5,000. Experts on Homer, who died in 1910, had not been aware of the painting's existence.
This doesn't happen only to lucky amateurs. Three years ago the Detroit Institute of Arts sent a 15th century Flemish painting to New York for cleaning. The restorer found a major portion of the picture had been crudely painted over.
The picture underneath was identified as a masterpiece by Jan Van Eyck. The institute had paid $18,000 for the original work, supposedly by Petrus Christus. It insured the restored painting, "St. Jerome in His Study," for $150,000.
Incidents like these help build an American dream—finding an art masterpiece while cleaning the attic or browsing in the neighborhood second hand store. But there is a reverse side, typified by the great Van Meegeren art hoax.
Starting in 1938, this obscure Dutch artist forged a series of eight pictures—two "De Hoofdes" and six "Vermeers"—and sold them for more than 2½ million dollars.
After World War II, one of the pictures was found in the 300-million-dollar hoard of art collected by Nazi bigwig Hermann Goering and traced back to Van Meegeren, who had sold it to a dealer.
The little Dutch artist faced charges of collaboration for letting a national treasure fall into enemy hands. Only then did he confess he had forged a string of such "treasures." But he was believed only after he had painted another "Vermeer" before an astounded jury.
Closer to home, newspapers recently headlined the discovery in California of 10 paintings described as Italian Renaissance masterpieces, reportedly worth 10 to 12 million dollars.

Leading art authorities quickly expressed skepticism. Suspicion was spurred by announcement that it had taken only three months to restore the paintings. (William Suhr, noted New York conservator, spent six months alone chipping off muddy paint from Detroit's Christus—turned Van Eyck.)
There are other headlines—the Chicago Art Institute rejects as fake a painting which other experts say may be a Titian, worth $100,000 or more; an elderly San Diego man whose hobby is rummage sales picks up an etching for 35 cents that he says is a Rembrandt sketch worth $1,500.
Such cases point up a ferment of claim and counterclaim in the art world.
Fascination seems to grow in proportion to the number of zeroes after the dollar sign on a work of art. The headlines mean headaches for museum curators and art scholars.
"A museum might have 3,000 art objects of great value and interest," says Dr. Franklin Biebel, director of New York's Frick collection. "Yet more attention is paid to the rare fake that turns up than to the museum as a whole."

"No sincere critic is ever infallible," says Biebel. "The greatest of them frequently admit mistakes. So do museums."
"But this situation will exist unless someone invents a magic machine into which you could put a Rembrandt and have it come out authenticated beyond any shadow of a doubt."

Modern X-rays, fluoroscopes, and ultraviolet light dig below the surface of a painting. Leading museums have laboratories for careful technical analyses.
But such tests usually establish only what a painting is not—fretting out discrepancies in age and paint pigments.
It is here that the connoisseur's knowledge and training cast the decisive vote. Suhr, the Frick museum's consultant on conservation, says "After 40 years of intimate connection with the great masters, I read their handwriting in brush strokes. I see how the artist expresses his individual self in composition, color and subject matter—things that are like hidden trademarks."

Metropolitan Museum of Art curator Theodore Rousseau figured in the recent debunking of two New York brothers accused of trying to pass off a wide variety of fake paintings. Rousseau said the canvases were vastly inferior copies made by art students.
The two dealers had price tags of $100,000 on a "Van Gogh," $20,000 on a "Gauguin," $175,000 each for two "Picassos" and $150,000 on a "Cezanne."
The case is one of the comparatively rare ones in which formal charges have been brought involving dealings in suspect art. It also illustrates skyrocketing art prices.
In the past year alone, art objects have shown one of the greatest increases in value of any goods on the market. Canvases by the French post-impressionists brought 8 per cent more in 1959 than in 1958.
The old Dutch masters also have enjoyed renewed popularity. In London last spring, a world record auction price of $770,000 was paid for Rubens' "Adoration before Congress and as Eisenhower acknowledged at his news conference, that individual military leaders get carried away with the righteousness of their own individual ideas on defense needs.
The best answer Eisenhower could give to the disagreements among the top military men is that he listens to their arguments and tries to make the best decision he can.
Thus, the argument comes back to where it was before: That Eisenhower considers himself probably the best-informed man on military needs and the decisions that get criticized are really his decisions.
Since he's willing to take responsibility, then the one the critics of defense are arguing with all the time is really Eisenhower himself.

of the Nazi." That price may be rivaled this spring when Rembrandt's "Juno" goes up for sale.
The story behind the "Juno" is the kind that keeps museums curators awake nights. A written record of the picture dates back to 1665, when it was the subject of a lawsuit between Rembrandt and a collector. Then the portrait disappeared for more than two centuries.
It turned up, unrecognized, in a Bonn gallery which sold it for $200 in 1935. Eventually it was acquired by an authority on Dutch masters, who recognized it as a genuine Rembrandt.
There are enough legitimate "lost" masterpieces like this to whet the zest of any collector.
During World War II, millions of dollars worth of paintings vanished in Europe, hidden away by owners or plundered as war spoils. One of these, a portrait by Raphael which disappeared in Poland, is valued at close to one million dollars.
Carolyn Keck, conservator at the Brooklyn Museum, once found a valued painting by the early American artist, William Weems, hidden in what she calls "a dog of a canvas" donated to her by another museum for a demonstration in art restoration.
How do museums or galleries make sure they are spending their money on a genuine work?
Murray Pease heads a staff of 16 art technicians as chief conservator at the Metropolitan Museum. He says "We conduct careful chemical and laboratory tests on each work considered for acquisition. We can tell if there has been much restoration through shadowgraphs and ultraviolet light. Chemical tests are a further clue to age of paint and canvas."
Then, Metropolitan's Curator Rousseau says, "On the basis of what we know of the artist, his style composition, brushwork, coloring, we make our decision."
Pease admits to "a certain amount of stage fright" whenever he goes to work on, say, a $75,000 Raphael, or even a lackluster, unsigned work from a rich private collection.
"In this field," says Pease, "anybody worth his salt gives up when he stops being nervous."

Four Cylinders Seen On '61 Cars

By JACK VANDENBERG
UPI Automotive Editor
DETROIT (UPI)—Four-cylinder engines, unknown to American-made passenger cars for seven years, are expected to make a comeback in 1961.
Pontiac is planning to use a four-cylinder in-line engine on the new small car it is expected to introduce along with its 1961 models.
And Ford Motor Co. is known to be working on a four-cylinder engine for use in a new subcompact car its engineers have been working on to compete with imported makes like the Volkswagen and Renault.

Details of the Ford engine were not known but it was known that engineers were considering the use of aluminum in the cylinder block.
The Pontiac engine was expected to be made of cast iron but, otherwise, it will have little resemblance to the oldtime four-cylinder engines.
Sources say it will be fitted 45 degrees, making it look much like a V-8 engine cut in half between the two banks of cylinders. This engine will have almost 200 cubic inches of displacement and will develop as much horsepower as any of the sixes currently used in compact cars, about 125.
The last American-made cars to use four-cylinder engines were the Aero Willys and the Henry J, both of which halted production in 1953, the Henry J after only four years of existence.
The four-cylinder engine was the basic powerplant of most economical cars in the auto industry's early history. It was used by the Model T and Model A Fords.

But the demand for greater power and smoother engine operation soon brought the six-cylinder engine into dominance and eventually the V-8.
The obvious advantage of greater economy and the fact that it was an inherently efficient engine were the strong points of the four-cylinder powerplant. Other advantages included less maintenance costs than other engines with more cylinders, because of its fewer moving parts, and its lighter weight.
There is a ceiling, however, on how much power four cylinders can develop. Modern engineering achievements have boosted that ceiling considerably, particularly through high compression ratios, but no engineer would think of putting a four-cylinder engine in a standard sized car today.

Because of the greater lapse of time between each firing of the pistons during each revolution of the crankshaft, the four-cylinder engine runs rougher than engines with more cylinders. This made a big difference to engineers who were seeking to make cars run quieter and smoother without as much regard for costs.
Increased piston displacement which leads to increased power is one of the factors making the four-cylinder engine's comeback possible. But perhaps another is the fact that in Pontiac's case at least, the engine will be tilted.

The tilted engine, used by Chrysler Corp. with six-cylinders on its Valiant, allows the engineers to put the carburetor farther from the cylinders to which it feeds a fuel-air mixture. Longer intake manifolds means the amount of fuel-air mixture delivered to each cylinder is more nearly equal. With shorter manifolds, the cylinders close to the carburetor get more fuel than those at the ends.
More equal distribution of the fuel to the cylinders will give the engine greater power and smoother performance.

'Hurrah'
PARIS (AP)—Austere President Charles de Gaulle let go with an enthusiastic "hurrah" at the successful explosion of France's first atomic bomb.
In a message to Pierre Guillaumet, who directed the test in the Sahara, De Gaulle said: "Hurrah for France! Since this morning she is stronger and prouder. From the bottom of my heart, thanks to you and those who, for France, have achieved this magnificent success."

ACCORDING TO IKE

Middle Of Road Policy Is Best

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the years to come what probably will be most quoted from President Eisenhower's news conference this week is not what he said on nuclear test or payola but his ideas on the presidency.
When examined, those ideas don't throw any new light on the tasks of the man in the White House, present or future, but they at least establish the position Eisenhower feels he takes in the national life.
He was asked, in view of his seven years' experience, what he thought would be the problems of the man who succeeded him. He said he wouldn't try to predict the future but he could give some of his own thinking.

He took a position between the "so-called ultra liberal" who he said wants only "to give your money away for some pet theory of his own," and the reactionary who he thinks should be repudiated like the devil and all his works.
In other words, Eisenhower was calling himself a moderate, a middle-of-the-roader, perhaps a conservative and maybe even a liberal since he blasted only the "ultra-liberal."

His point was that the man in the White House, whoever he is, must steer a course between extremes. And, he said, "I hope that I am helping to establish a pattern" for solving problems in the manner of reasonable men.

He may have been trying to give an insight into his presidential conduct. Avoiding fights with individuals or political parties by following a non-naming course that creates no needless enmity or opposition. This is in contrast with the conduct of many presidents in the past and may in the future provide a guide-line for political candidates who can't fail to look for the secret of Eisenhower's political success and popularity.

But as for the way he actually tackles the problems which come before him, Eisenhower provided nothing that a top executive in a big corporation wouldn't know and practice.

He said the problems which come to him for handling, domestic or foreign, have to be studied for their long-term and short-term effect. There's nothing new in that. That kind of consideration is expected.

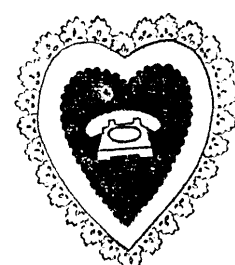

He said—as he has said so many times before—that before deciding a problem he seeks the best advice he can get.

This is exactly what he has been saying recently when asked about the confusion in American defense—as it shows up in the talk of politicians and the conflicting views of the military leaders.

But it turns out, as the military leaders demonstrated in testimony

Science And You

By JOHN BARBOUR
NEW YORK (AP) — If there's one ship in the Navy that doesn't dare get lost, it's the USS Compass Island.

land makes—in storm or calm—goes unnoticed or unrecorded by the super-sensitive balances in her electronic heart.

Other devices, looking like small observatories, watch the stars and listen to radio waves from the sun and moon to read the ship's position and check up on its electronic navigator. A 564-foot converted Mariner-class freighter, the Compass Island is a floating laboratory engaged in the development of a navigational system that will, someday, allow U.S. submarines to travel blind and silent anywhere in the world.

Unless missile subs, hiding in enemy waters, know precisely their positions, they can't hope to hit enemy targets hundreds of miles away on the mainland. All conventional forms of navigation require a submarine to break the surface at least partly to get a "fix."

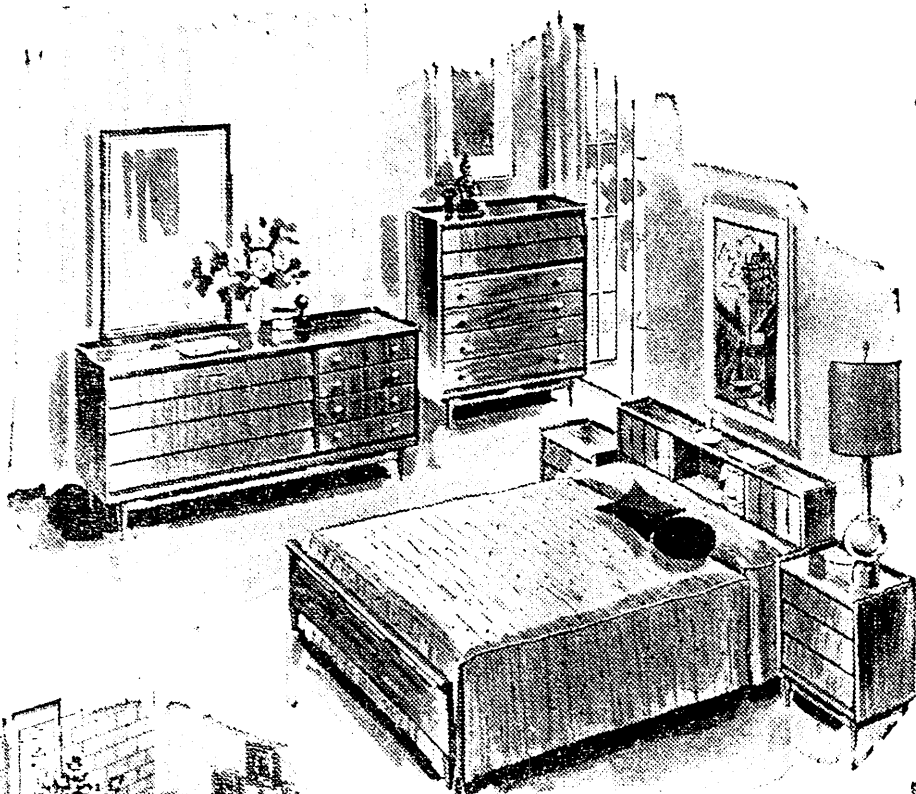

The Navy hopes to overcome this breach of complete concealment by developing an inertial guidance system that would enable subs to remember where they are at all times. The system under study is a first cousin to the fantastically accurate guidance systems used in ballistic missiles.

Amidships, the Compass Island

carried the sensing devices and computers that keep track of her course knowing only her starting position. Each slight motion the Compass Island makes—each tiny shove of the waves, each turn of her screws—must be recorded, compiling a continual diary of her trip.

Electronic computers read the movement of the trip—every move since the ship left port—and the total of these movements should give the ship's position. An inertial guidance system has two sections—one reporting movement and speed in any direction and the other recording this data and computing the sum of the movement.

A 31-year-old Texas University graduate is out to prove that "city hall can ring a pleasant bell."

Mention "city hall" to a Monroe resident. Don't be surprised if he thinks of a decrepit, out-moded type of building.

Progress in Louisiana usually kicks aside the ugly, the confining or useless. Old, worn-out buildings make way for modern structures.

The Ouachita - Monroe Regional Planning Commission, now at the point of completion on the city's Master Plan, has recommended a six-block downtown site for a government center, to replace the fortress-like city hall. That's for the future.

IDEA

But Clyde Webb, formerly of Monroe, couldn't erase his idea of planning the type of modern civic center he'd like to see in this city.

He undertook designing such a center as his final design problem in the school of architecture at the University of Texas.

The 10-week problem equalled a "final exam" and he breezed through it with a B grade last month.

His city government center, planned for a population of 100,000 "could be used in any city," according to Webb. In fact, he drew some inspiration from the Brazos County (Texas) Courthouse, which is of "campus" structure like his design.

"It's a solution for city government. I don't want to present it as a proposal for Monroe's city hall," he said, stressing that he is not yet a registered architect.

PERSONALIZED

"I tried to personalize city government buildings — to bring the government to the people so they could understand it and be more interested in it," Webb explains.

The center is composed of several buildings, and requires one city block. On the outside are one-story structures, easily entered from the street.

Collection departments for water and electricity bills, taxes, and buildings for plumbing, electrical and building inspectors and personnel are located at the outer front of the center. The public has greatest contact with these departments.

A conference room, cafeteria,

offices for the city attorney and civil defense comprise the other one-story outer buildings.

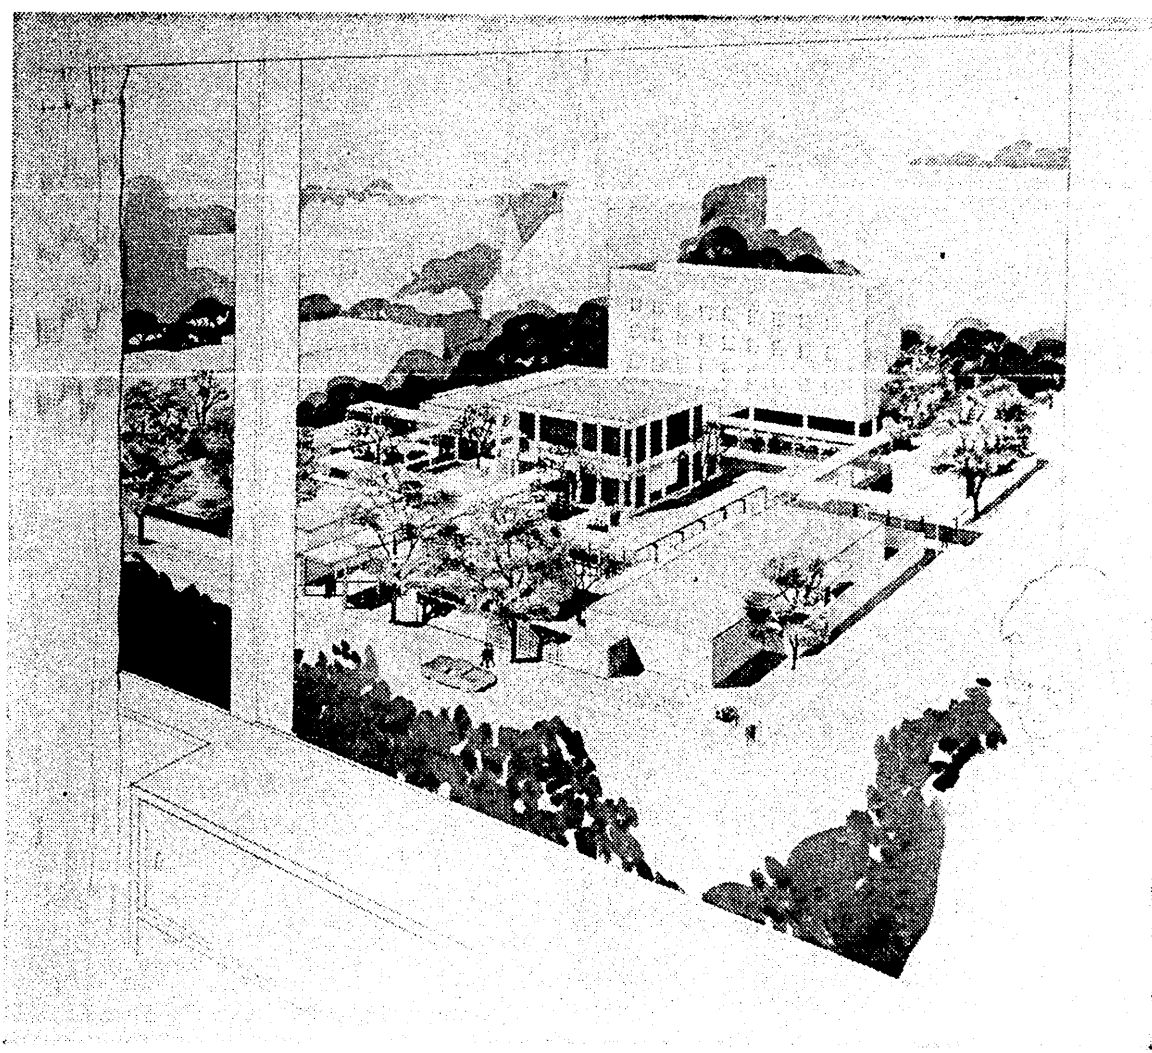

Covered walkways, bounded by pools, planting boxes, grass, shade trees and a paving pattern, connect the buildings.

In the center of the block, a sleek, glass-walled "city hall" is designed for the mayor and commissioners.

Behind it, on the edge of the lot and flanked by one-story buildings, is a four-story building for departments "which require just an office," and the Chamber of Commerce.

SYMBOLIZES

"Massing of the buildings symbolizes government structure. Commissioners and administration offices are in the center, with all other city departments on the perimeter," the designer pointed out.

"The center is broken down on a small scale into departments. Those requiring access are at the place where you have it readily. The courts inside are designed to invite people into the center — make them feel at home — and create an interest in city government.

"Breaking up government into its various functions makes it more interesting and convenient to the public," he added.

Although Webb solved a local parking problem in his plans, he was quick to point out that the "plan itself would have to be set in an area with adjacent parking facilities."

ATMOSPHERE

A pleasant atmosphere in government buildings rubs off on officials, employees and the public, he believes.

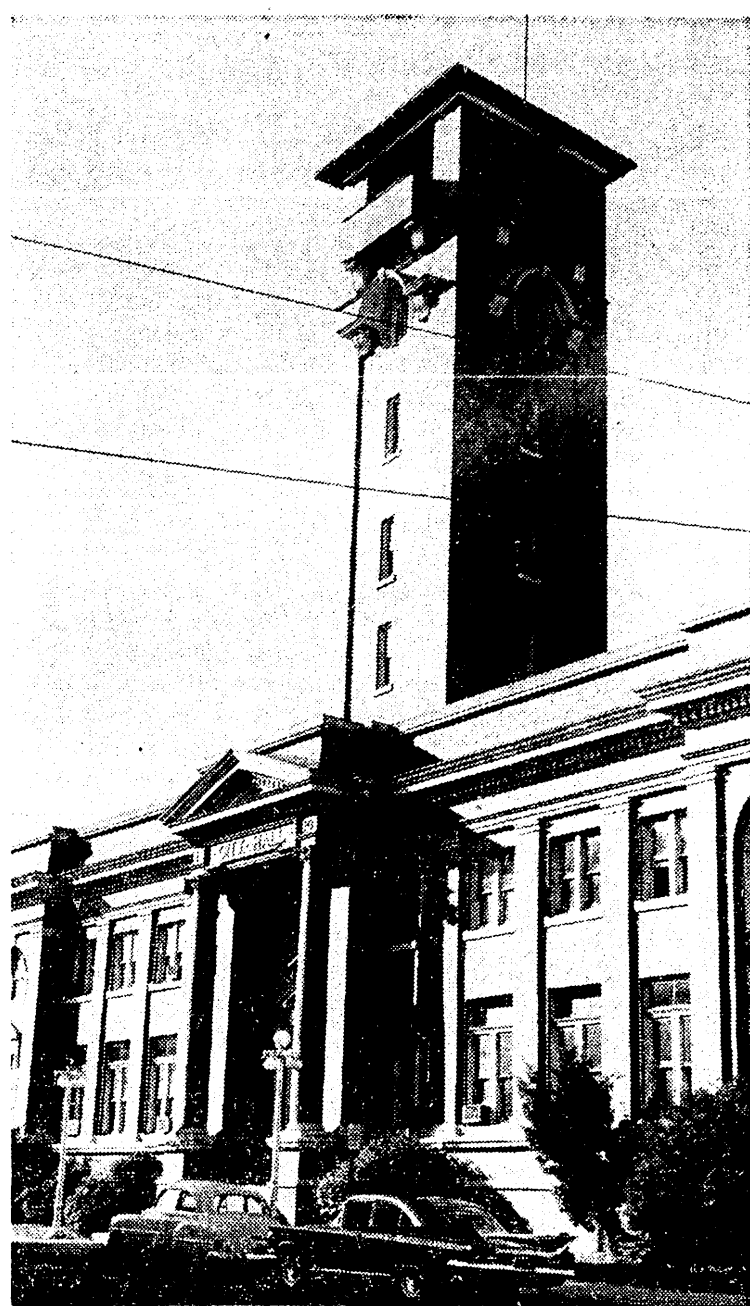

"I've been interested in the prospects of improving city government buildings for quite some time," admitted the industrious Webb. He worked in an Austin, Tex., architects' firm for the past three years, while attending school and supporting his wife and two youngsters.

Marvin C. Hill Jr., resident planner for the Ouachita-Monroe Regional Planning Commission, terms the design, "a very nice overall plan."

Questioned about Monroe's actual plans for a government center, he said that the Commission tentatively has recommended a six-block site, bounded by Grammont, Sixth, Calypso and Hall Streets.

Such a site would provide for adequate parking.

Monroe's Present City Hall

"We also plan for more buildings in our government center," said Hill.

Police station, jail, city hall, as well as any state and parish offices, which want to be included, will be part of the center, "anything related to government."

City officials will select the architect. The design is not worked out yet, and the proposed location is not purchased.

But plans are in the offing for the kind of government center of which Clyde Webb, and Monroe's 20,000 residents, will be proud.

Fire Tower Overlooking Timberland, Major Attraction

By TOMMY PARKS
Staff Writer

Several warm, sunny days in the early part of last week carried a very strong hint of impending spring, and area residents responded with an eye set on the outdoors.

Across Monroe and West Monroe, the afternoon traffic seemed unusually heavy with "hometown sight-seers" — people who could not resist the urge to leave their homes or offices and take in as much of the warm freshness outside as possible.

HOLIDAY

Convertibles had a holiday, and it seemed every auto traveled open-air style.

Most of these motorists were heading away from the city and the jobs that had more or less confined them to a dreary, blustery winter of work. Now that the sunshine was streaming from a pale blue sky with a freshness to match the springlike air, these people were anxious to leave the city and, for a short while at least, "get away from it all."

A surprising number ended up at the Luna fire tower, set in the rolling timber section out from West Monroe. The scene there, as many area residents will say, is one of the most beautiful in Ouachita parish.

HILLS

The fire tower, about ten miles west of the Ouachita river, looks out over thousands of acres of rolling hills, thickly populated with rich green pine trees. It is set several miles back in the timber away from any main highway, and has consequently become a favorite picnic spot or respite for people in the Twin Cities and surrounding area.

Those who have visited the scene will readily explain why. Even the narrow, shady roads leading through the hilly timberland toward the tower seem to have a quieting effect on the worries that a person might bring in from the hustle and bustle of city life.

Leading from the Chatham highway, a shaded gravel road ambles through the rolling tree-covered hills, constantly curving and dipping from hilltop to valley until it reaches the tower.

HIGH SPOT

The tower itself stands on one of the highest hills in the area, a setting which adds considerably to its 85-foot elevation. Louisiana Forestry Commission men who remain in the tower throughout the day and many times throughout the night state that on a relatively clear day, a person is able to see for about ten miles in any direction, and even farther with a telescope or binoculars.

The Forestry Commission men themselves are another reason for the popularity of the fire tower; area persons know them as the most congenial workers of any service organization.

Since these men are on duty practically every hour of the day (and often at night), they are usually on hand to answer questions and point out especially interesting aspects of the tower or surrounding country to the many visitors who climb the windy heights to the small observation room at the top.

GUEST BOOK

"We always enjoy having visitors and even have a special guest book up here for each one to sign before he leaves," one tower worker commented.

Although there are two other similar fire towers in the parish, the one at Luna is considered by many as the most picturesque.

All three, though, perform the same duties in their work of spotting and preventing destructive forest fires in the area. In each observation room, the forestry worker keeps a special two-way radio which he uses to give continuous reports of conditions to the main office or another tower. With this radio, too, he can correlate findings of any smoke or fire with the other towers and thus pinpoint the danger spot so that firefighters would have little trouble in locating and destroying the fire or other trouble.

A. N. Mize and J. A. Browder, two forestry men who were on duty in the Luna tower last week, commented that it was probably the highest of the three towers in the parish because of the high hill on which it is set.

"Those treetops down there were just little sprigs when the tower was built," Browder said, pointing to the waving treetops that reached about halfway up the tower. "As a matter of fact, lots of this timber around here was pretty much cut or burned down when this tower was put here, and the place seemed pretty bare compared to the way it looks today."

Far down at the foot of the hill from where the tower is set, a miniature valley seems to have been created from a relatively bare space between the hills. It is complete with a lake at one end, a pasture with grazing cattle, and an almost hidden home in the foot of the trees at the other end.

This small-scale valley is one of the few places in the area which is not covered with a thick growth of pines.

"I can remember when the place was almost bare and a person could stand on the top of this hill and see some of the distant buildings of Monroe," Mize reflected. "That was a good while before the tower was built."

Now the trees have grown in a thick, green blanket across the countryside, making the fire tower necessary and creating one of the area's most picturesque and popular retreats from the activities of routine life.

Women Still Urge Rights

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most men may think women have equal rights and privileges, too.

Just the same, a band of militant, white-haired indomitable women wants to put it in writing.

They are the hard core of the National Woman's Party, an outgrowth of the Suffragettes, who have fought for years for a constitutional amendment which says:

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

PENDING IN SENATE

The amendment has been unanimously approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee and is pending before the Senate where a two-thirds favorable vote is needed.

"If we don't get it this year," said 35-year-old Mrs. Emma Guley Miller, puffing philosophically on a cigarette, "we'll get it sometime."

Mrs. Miller, of Slippery Rock, Pa., is national chairman of the party and as glib a spokesman as any of the leaders of the other two better known parties.

The "equal rights" brigade contends women are "penalized" on many fronts because of "sex." In some states they are not allowed to serve on juries and in other states they are not allowed to dispose of their property.

They claim a constitutional amendment would wipe out a "thousand and one inequities." Mrs. Miller and her cohorts like to point out that Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has come around to their way of thinking.

In the 1940s Mrs. R. led the opposition. A few years ago she switched over and decided women "can now take care of themselves," according to Mrs. Miller who tells of the conquest with great satisfaction.

Mrs. Miller and other equal rights advocates aren't afraid the extra male courtesies will be wiped out by a constitutional amendment. The men, they say, will still be "pretty chivalrous" and hold the door open.

Race Relations Fallacy

Today is Race Relations Sunday, proclaimed annually by the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. with the objective of using Christianity as a foundation for promoting racial peace and understanding—fundamentally among all races, but specifically in the United States between the white and Negro races.

In that objective, taken by itself, there is worthiness. But the manner in which the proclaimed objective actually is sought, and purposes for which Race Relations Sunday actually is used, nullify whatever worthiness exists. In its practical effect, Race Relations Sunday is used by the National Council of Churches as a sounding board intended to put forth propaganda from thousands of Protestant pulpits in behalf of complete social, religious and civic integration of the Negro and white races in the United States.

This year the theme of a supposedly religious approach to peaceful relations between Negroes and whites in the United States actually is use of Protestantism to further housing integration, an explosive issue in many states outside the South and a cause of repeated violence in some. This year's theme also follows the theme of past annual National Council of Churches observance of its Race Relations Sunday by twisting the inherent American principles of freedom of worship into demand that environment of worship should be as the National Council determines rather than as the worshippers may desire—or else it is not Christian.

The N.C.C.—National Council of Churches—is made up of all of the major Protestant denominations in the United States except the Southern Baptist Convention. All other major Baptist groups, totaling a majority of individual Baptists in the nation, are included as are the Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Methodist denominations. Together the 34 denominations in the N.C.C. embrace some 39,000,000 Protestants in this country.

Individual churches, clergy and congregations have no direct voice in the N.C.C. and its policies and operations, but through them comes the money to support propaganda operations of the N.C.C. and its various divisions not only in furthering Christianity but in urging such courses as social and religious integration and recognition of Red China. The N.C.C. spends approximately $17,000,000 a year for its own upkeep.

Race Relations Sunday is handled directly by the N. C. C. Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, headed by J. Oscar Lee, a Negro minister, and Alfred S. Kramer, a white minister. Lee is author of a special Race Relations Message which the N.C.C. expects to be read today from thousands of Protestant pulpits all over the country, including some in the South. There will, of course, also be thousands of Protestant churches where it is not read or used in any way.

This message deals especially with promotion of housing integration throughout the United States, stating that "the elimination of racial segregation in housing is essential if the churches are to serve people on a racially inclusive basis and if Christians are to overcome estrangement as well as to bind up the broken fellowship in our society." It further states that "racial segregation is sinful" and urges churches to eliminate it from their practices.

The message further says that "we express our life in deeds, as Christians, when we sell or rent property to persons on the basis of their personal preference and financial ability without regard to race."

Thus, "personal preference" is given as a priority to be enjoyed by anyone in all factors of selling or renting property except in the factor of race. There, the N.C.C. demand is that personal preference be eliminated if it is for racial separation.

"Personal preference" certainly is a foundation of religious freedom and freedom to choose the manner of worship. Yet, the N.C.C. insists—in its whole program of integration as put forth through its Department of Racial and Cultural Relations not only as to Race Relations Sunday but as to various other activities—that racial personal preference be eliminated in worship, and in all other phases of living. This has brought protests from a considerable number of Negro as well as white churches.

The United Church Women, the women's division of the N.C.C., officially approves and follows the same racial propaganda lines as the Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, particularly in promotion of World Day of Prayer and Inter-Faith Day luncheon which are held nationally as inter-racial though not so observed by Southern United Church Women chapters except in a few instances.

Promotion of peaceful relations between all peoples of all races is a natural function of Christianity. But use of Christianity and of Protestant pulpits as a means to push religious and social practices on people who do not want them—whether the people be white or black—is not.

Herter Warns Russia

The Berlin Airlift of 1948 was a remarkable piece of international charity work by the United States military agencies in behalf of ex-enemy nationals. But the use of the isolated German city by the Russians as a means to draw ransom in the form of approved aggression is even more significant.

In 1948, the Russians had threatened to cut off supply transportation by highway and rail from the former German capital. On the surface it appeared the British, American and French troops would have to leave the western half of the city and allow it to fall completely into the lineup of east European satellites.

While the airlift was far more successful than the Russians had anticipated, this one factor did not "break" the blockade. At another point on the globe, the western nations accepted the final departure of Nationalist China from the Asian mainland.

On several occasions between 1950 and 1958, Russia first threatened Berlin then went on to make economic advances and territorial gains in the Middle and Far East.

A year ago, Khrushchev set a date and demanded Berlin go "all East" or the Russians would fire on U.S., British or West German trains or transport aircraft. For his bluff and subsequent softening, Premier Khrushchev won a trip to the United States. He had to furnish his own airplane, but he made full use of this as a show of Soviet industrial progress.

With a late spring "summit" meeting slated this year in Geneva, Secretary of State Christian Herter has taken a stand against Russia talking for a one-sided settlement of Berlin prior to the talks.

He made it clear he was concerned with recent statements of Khrushchev to Italian President Giovanni Gronchi who is now visiting the Soviet Union. Any threat against Berlin before the scheduled meeting, Herter said, would violate Khrushchev's pledge to Eisenhower made at the meeting of the two at Camp David.

Past observation has shown that the Russians are as likely to honor or decisions reached at an off the record chat such as were the Camp David talks just as much or more so than formal agreements with the terms spelled out.

Where Are Great Men?

Many Difficult Crosses Borne Nobly By Abraham Lincoln Without Malice Or Hatred

It is not unusual these days for table chat to wander to the illusive question of "Why do we not have great men, anymore?" And that leads to an argument over what is meant by "great"—an argument that often leads to a vast difference of opinion but it can be brought to a head by the one word, Lincoln.

Of course, when Lincoln was a candidate for president, he bore the brunt of attack, of personal denigration, even of references to his father, Thomas, who was not much to talk about, and his mother, Nancy Hanks who was less than she should have been. He suffered calumny during the whole of his first year in the presidency and was assassinated after his reelection.

But these are the crosses men bear and Abraham Lincoln bore his nobly and without malice or hatred. His was a period of bitterness, of distress, of vile antagonisms. Lincoln was neither a southerner nor a northerner. His family was of border stock, but basically southern. He matured in Illinois. His cultural background was plebeian; he came to the drifters of those days, the "merry-do-colls."

His education was of his own making. No university can claim him. No collegiate degree appended his name. His language came from the Bible and Shakespeare which he read by candlelight in a drab house in New Salem, Illinois. His religion was the mercy of God.

In an emergency, this tall, homely, simple man possessed the courage, selflessness and intellectual fortitude to save his country. But there were other men in his day who might have saved the country, and they were on both sides. Horace Greeley, William H. Seward, Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee—these were not pignores, but Lincoln towers

Lincoln's conduct in office is probably no different than dozens of men who have held or might have held that high post. But his words bespeak nobility of soul. And we know that they are his words. The testimony as to who wrote "The Gettysburg Address" is beyond doubt. Lincoln wrote it. He had no ghost-writer. The language was his; the ideas were his. He required no word-slinger, no copy-writer, no punctuation-marker to aid him.

Abraham Lincoln lived in an age when one who could write, prided himself on his ability. In his Proclamation of March 30, 1863, Abraham Lincoln wrote:

"Whereas it is the duty of nations as well as of men to own their dependence upon the overruling power of God, to confess their sins and transgressions in humble sorrow, yet with assured hope that genuine repentance will lead to mercy and pardon, and to recognize the sublime truth, announced in the Holy Scriptures and proven by all history, that those nations only are blessed whose God is the Lord;

"And, inasmuch as we know that by His divine law nations, like individuals, are subjected to punishments and chastisements in this world, may we not justly fear that the awful calamity of civil war which now desolates the land may be but a punishment inflicted upon us for our presumptuous sins, to the needful end of our national reformation as a whole people?"

In the year, 1960, this could have been said by someone in a high position, for the situation is identical. Again on July 15, 1863, Lincoln wrote:

"... But these victories have been accorded not without sacrifices of life, limb, health, and liberty, incurred by brave, loyal, and patriotic citizens, domestic affliction in every part of the country follows in the train of these fearful bereavements."

It is in his Fourth Message on the State of the Union that Lincoln states his philosophy in a passing phrase:

"The most reliable indication of public purpose in this country is derived through our popular elections. Judging by the recent canvass and its result, the purpose of the people within the loyal States to maintain the integrity of the Union was never more firm nor more nearly unanimous than now."

There have been much heated controversy as to the proper means and best mode of advancing the Union cause, but on the distinct issue of Union or no Union the politicians have shown their instinctive knowledge that there is no diversity among the people...

Missile Story

'Front Lines' Of Cold War Are At Big Ballistic Plants

SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA — To visit the "front lines" of the Cold War one must go where the big ballistic missiles are — that is, to the research laboratories, engineering centers, missile-making plants, test and firing sites.

Anybody who makes an Up Front tour is likely to read with lifted eyebrows such statements as President Eisenhower made at a recent press conference. In answering a question about America's possible loss of prestige in running behind Russia in the missile-launching race, Mr. Eisenhower said:

"Well, I made a long trip — 22,300 miles to 11 nations in three continents — and certainly if there wasn't evidence that the prestige of America was high, then I was badly mistaken."

But if Mr. Eisenhower relies on curiosity-seeking crowds in India, Pakistan, Afghanistan and Morocco to gauge America's prestige or position in world affairs, he is going to the wrong oracle for his signs. In the same conference, the President tried to defend with rhetoric — and not much else — his argument that we are well-positioned in the missile race. With obvious reference to the SAC Commander, General Thomas Power, and to the Air Research Development chief, General Bernard Schriever, Mr. Eisenhower expounded that "to many generals have all sorts of ideas." The President pretends to believe his rear echelon men — Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, General Nathan Twining, and Defense Secretary, Thomas Gates. But, again, the President is going to the wrong people to tell him what's happening Up Front.

If the Commander in Chief is going to reassure us about the missile race, he ought to do so after he has walked through engine test facilities, wind tunnel buildings, aerospace chambers, missile plants, missile sites and after he has talked to his front line commanders — Generals Power and Schriever among them. We are not going to get much deterrence or retaliation from the volatile mobs of the uncommitted East. This is a Cold War in which the enemy knows a good deal about our missile power.

It is a conflict in which it pays, generally, to exhibit and not to conceal our forces. For these reasons, Mr. Eisenhower ought to give much more attention to the American production lines. He ought to consult more than he ever has with his operations officers, like Power and Schriever. He ought to put less than total reliance upon rear echelon administrators like Twining and Gates, good men though they be.

Even a lay visitor to the Up Front lines is bound to come away with some reservations about preparedness. I have walked through the Convair plant at San Diego where our only operational ICBM is manufactured. Did the plant hum? Did it clang? Was it a scene of urgency and hustle? No, it was none of these. An official commented by saying that his plant was running on a 5-day week at about 50 per cent of capacity.

Well, maybe this is a satisfactory way to compete with the Soviet colossus. The President, from his far-in-the-rear headquarters, seems to think so. It takes two years of lead — time to produce an Atlas and its base. Theoretically, by 1962-63 we will have a whole new generation of strategic missiles on hand and operational — the Titan, which is almost ready, the Polaris, which is sea-borne, and the Minuteman, which is concealable and mobile by land.

Candidate Shift

Both Parties Likely To Break Custom In Naming Candidates

A couple of time-worn watchwords of the two major political parties are going to get a test in 1960.

Both Republicans and Democrats have held emphatic views about the geographical availability of their Presidential candidates. The ancient belief and enunciation of the Democrats is that the farther west they went for their nominee the worse they would fare in the election. The Republicans felt that the farther east they went for their standard bearer the less likely their chance of winning.

Apparently neither party this year is going to pluck its candidate from the area from which have come its most bountiful crops of winners.

The two party system (and the convention system as well) really began in 1832 when the Democrats met in Baltimore and gave an acclamation re-nomination to Andrew Jackson, whose 1828 nomination had been by Congressional caucus. The Republicans picked up the remnants of the Whigs and nominated their first Presidential candidate in 1856.

In the lives of the parties as we now know them, the Republicans have had just two winning bona fide eastern Presidential candidates — Theodore Roosevelt and Calvin Coolidge — and both were already in the White House, having been elected Vice President and succeeded to the office upon the death of Presidents.

Take the case of the Democrats. Their candidate with the farthest west residence was Harry S. Truman, who also went to the White House on the death of a President. The party hardly considered his Presidential timber in 1944 when he was nominated as Franklin D. Roosevelt's third vice presidential running mate.

The farthest west the Democrats have gone for a successful Presidential candidate by original nomination is Nashville, Tennessee, which supplied both Jackson and James K. Polk. Tennessee was classified as west when Jackson was elected and thereafter.

The Republicans have never nominated a resident Southerner for President although their first candidate, John C. Fremont was born in Savannah, Georgia, and their most recent candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower in Denison, Texas.

The last resident southerner elected President was Zachary Taylor, born in Virginia and elected from Louisiana. Taylor was a Whig. Woodrow Wilson, Virginia-born, was Governor of New Jersey when elected President in 1912.

Other than Truman, who came to the White House upon the death of an elected President, the Democrats in 108 years have elected Presidents only from New Hampshire, (Pierce); Pennsylvania, (Buchanan); New York, (Cleveland and F. D. Roosevelt) and New Jersey, (Wilson).

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that teachers get tired of hearing — or overhearing: "Those that can, do; those that can't, teach."

"What are you teachers always crabbing about? After all, you get the whole summer off."

"She looks like a teacher."

"I hear the reason she never married was she had an unhappy love affair."

"Surely you must be mistaken. My son wouldn't have said a thing like that to anyone—even a teacher."

"The job pays $3,500, and, of course, you'll coach the dramatics club, chaperone the Friday night dances, take tickets at the football games and—"

"What does she know about children? She doesn't have any of her own."

"Naturally, your private life is your own, Miss Blatz, but this is a small town and we've never had a woman teacher who smoked in public."

"Frankly, the opportunity for advancement is limited, but you'll have the satisfaction of molding young minds."

"I envy you teachers. Working with young people must help keep you young yourself."

"I don't know where he picks up such language—unless it's in school."

It has been when the Democrats crossed the Mississippi and took a man either born there or resident if that area that resulted have been most catastrophic. With William Jennings Bryan born in Illinois and resident of Nebraska, they lost in 1896, 1900 and 1908. With Stevenson, born in California and a resident of Illinois, they lost in 1952 and 1956. The Republicans show a 3 to 1 deficit in their excursions across the Mississippi. They lost, with Fremont of California, in 1856; won with Hoover of California in 1928 and lost with him in 1932; and lost with Landon of Kansas in 1936.

Eisenhower, too, was born west of the Mississippi, (in Texas) but of all our modern Presidents but of all our modern Presidents the least reference has been made to geography in discussing him. He grew up in Kansas, entered the Army, voted a few times, establishing a voting residence in New York for the election of 1952. By 1956 he had bought the farm at Gettysburg and voted in Pennsylvania.

The Republicans elected Lincoln of Illinois in 1860 and he was re-elected in 1864. Grant, born in Ohio and a resident of Illinois, was elected in 1868 and 1872. The G. O. P. put Hayes of Ohio in the White House and followed him with Garfield, also of Ohio, in 1880.

In 1884 the Republicans for the first time went east for their candidate, nominating James G. Blaine of Maine. The Democrats found a candidate in New York for their favorite hunting ground. That year, Cleveland defeated Blaine to give the Democrats their first President since the Civil War.

The Republicans got back in business with Benjamin Harrison born in Ohio and a resident of Indiana. Ohio also supplied William McKinley, William Howard Taft and Warren G. Harding.

Thus for 64 years, from 1860 to 1924, the Republicans elected no other President from any State other than Illinois, Ohio and Indiana, except for Theodore Roosevelt, who was born in New York, who went to the White House from the Vice Presidency.

And in a 92-year period, from 1856 to 1948, the Democrats elected no Presidential candidate other than from the three states of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey.

In 1960 the Republican seemed sure to nominate Nixon of California, which furnished Fremont who lost and Hoover who won and lost.

The Democrats will find their nominee in Massachusetts, Missouri, Texas, Illinois, or Minnesota. From Missouri, they voted with Truman after he was already in the White House. Illinois has been a jinx, starting with Stephen A. Douglas, whose nomination in 1860 split the party. Massachusetts, Texas, and Minnesota, if racing parlance, have no Democratic "form," none of them having ever supplied that party with an entry in a November Presidential sweepstakes.

CLASSICAL
BEETHOVEN SYMPHONY NO. 3
IN E FLAT MAJOR (OPUS 55)
"EROICA." Georg Solti conducting The Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.
London CS 6145 (stereo). We should be aware of approaching Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 with a serious experience; the intrinsic music is there for all to hear;
its amazing technical skill yields itself to methodical study. Georg
Solti and the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra's performance is superb and the stereo effect gives you the best seat in the theater.

MOZART SYMPHONY NO. 32
IN G MAJOR (K.318), side 1,
SYMPHONY NO. 38 IN D MA-JOR "PRAGUE" (K.504), side 2, Peter Maag conducting the London Symphony Orchestra, London CS 6107 (stereo). K.318 was written in 1779 and K.504 in 1786. The seven years difference between these two works is apparent in the increased independence of the woodwind parts and a growing eagerness for a thorough development of themes. The general quality of the musical thoughts is finer, richer and very interesting; while the orchestral effects are among the most successful of his career. The cut of this album is clean and free from distortion, and the stereo effect is above average.

J. S. BACH "CANTATAS." Helen Watts (contralto) with The Philharmonia of London directed by Thurston Dart, London SOI-60003 (stereo). The cantatas that Bach wrote are full of little-known beauties; viewed as a whole, they show clearly that his assured faith in the church was the stream which carried his whole existence along in safety to its close. A very fine performance is given by Helen Watts and Thurston Dart with the Philo-harmonia of London.

JOHANN STRAUSS, JR. OPE-RETTA WITHOUT WORDS "DIE FLEDERMAUS," Conrad Lieder conducting The Vienna Theater-Konzert Orchestra, Kapp KL-1153 (LP), KS-3036 (stereo). "Die Fledermaus" (The Bat) is perhaps the classic of light operas and has been played with unflinching regularity ever since its premiere in Vienna in 1874. The overture has, for many years, been a concert favorite, and the entire score is decorated with the fitting music and flowing melodies of Vienna's "Waltz King." The stereo separation is very high and the sound is clear.

BENJAMIN BRITTEN "PETER GRIMES," Chorus and Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden conducted by Benjamin Britten, London OSA 1305 (three records, stereo). In recording "Peter Grimes" London was very fortunate in that nearly all the soloists, as well as the chorus and orchestra, had recently performed the work at Covent Garden. The allusion that this album gives you is that you are sitting in the best seats in the opera house. The use of sound effects helps you realize the spatial effect of the performance.

"Peter Grimes" would prove to be a good way to spend a rainy afternoon.

POPULAR
"JANE MORGAN TIME," Kapp KL-1170 (LP), KS-3054
(stereo). Versatile Jane Morgan gives her very special interpretation of the sincerest human emotions that we find in this album.
From the simple faith of "Climb Ev'ry Mountain" to the hope and trust of "Wide Open Arms." With moonlight in her voice, Jane puts into words the eternal emotions which have inspired poets and composers through the centuries.

"SOMEBODY LOVES ME," Dinah Shore with orchestra conducted by Andre Previn, Capitol T 1296 (stereo), T 1296 (LP). Certainly there is no other female vocalist who has more completely gathered up the hearts of the entire nation than Dinah Shore.
Her warmth and immediacy are even more appealing than usual in this album. For one thing, the songs are all as comfortable and familiar as your own living room. Dinah treats them all in a way that makes you want to hum or sing along with her.

"EAST OF THE SUN," Anita Darian with orchestra directed by Frank Hunter, Kapp KL-1168 (LP), KS-3052 (stereo). The operatic stage and the bandstand may seem far removed from one another yet both are home territory to Anita Darian, who has played everything from leading roles for the New York City Opera to sophisticated supper club and hotel engagements. Anita was born in the states but her family is Armenian, and the selections include special arrangements of several of that country's loveliest folk songs along with other hits. This young lady has a fabulous voice and Kapp Records has recorded her dynamic range without distortion.

Good Portrait Is Drawn Of Illustrator Rockwell

MY ADVENTURES AS AN ILLUSTRATOR. By Norman Rockwell as told to Thomas Rockwell. Doubleday. $4.95.
If instead of artist you say picture maker, or use Rock-well's own unpretentious word illustrator, then it might well be that no one in this country has painted so many pictures admired and loved by so many people over so many years.

Producer of more than 300 covers for the Saturday Evening Post, he has, there alone, a potential audience of 300 times X number of millions, or whatever the magazine's circulation. Besides, he is responsible for innumerable advertising illustrations. Who ever painted a burlier, brow-ner, nobler soldier, a boy more rascally and adorable, a sweeter bride, a more devout couple at prayers, a jol-lier, bouncier Model T?

He was born in New York City in 1894; his mother's father was an unsuccessful artist; in his teens the boy was already vowed to the studio and after classes at the National Academy, he was ready, at 16, for full-time training at the Art Students League, with George Bridgman as his principal teacher and inspiration. He did odd jobs, of which the most novel was as an extra at the Metropolitan Opera, where proximity partly discussed him with Caruso and wholly with the ill-fitting and filthy costumes he wore. Then he did free-lance illustrating until at last in 1916, with fear and trembling, he braved the Saturday Evening Post and its overbearing editor George Horace Lorimer — and sold his first cover. Another magazine once tried to lure him away but he remained faithful, and present editor Ben Hibbs writes a glowing tribute as foreword to this book.

Rockwell has been a hard,
regular, disciplined worker.
He has suffered slumps; and partly to snap out of them has moved from a New York suburb to Arlington, Vt., and his present Stockbridge (Mass.) home. He has been divorced and remarried. He has been in Paris, and knows there are naughty things in this world, but he is unshak-ably determined to ignore them. As a city boy he saw a corpse dug up, and a drunk beat a woman; and though he acknowledges that is not the whole truth about the metropolis, it is the truth he prefers; thus he likes the country and regards it as, comparatively, innocent.

He writes somewhat as he paints, that is, with an eye to the face antimacassar, the horsehair sofa, the boy's leather, the trolley conductor's leather, edged change pocket.
Dickens was his favorite author, as some sorry imitations of Dickens dialogue testify. There is talk about models, from gypsies down at the heel up to Eisenhower; about getting dogs, chickens, turkeys and ducks to pose — you tack down the web of the duck's foot; about the advantages of camera as against live model. But this is not an art book; furthermore, it is painfully un-Bohemian; and you realize how remote it is when Rockwell calls Kenneth Hayes Miller an "extreme modernist."

It's a nice story of a nice man who knows a lot of nice people and leads a very nice life.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

A very interesting new book with a setting in present day England is "The Tumbled House" by Winston Graham.
It is a story of the publishing world and of a man who in attempting to destroy another man's reputation, ruined his own life. Running through the book is a good love story, which makes the book readable on many levels. Richard Llewellyn has never reached the heights of popularity with any of his books that he reached in "How Green Was My Valley." He has returned to the scene of that book for his latest offering "Up The Singing Mountain." Reviewers acclaim it and say that it will be extremely popular. Mr. Llewellyn has a gift of interpreting the life of the Welsh miners and his story should be interesting. A story of suspense and intrigue is "Morgan's Mountain" by Arthur Mayse. Don't miss these three exciting new books of fiction.

Every day the library is adding to its collection of interesting books of a factual nature.
"All the Birds of the Bible" by Alice Parmelee is an interesting book which will appeal to many readers and will have many uses. It is a beautifully illustrated and fills a definite need in our collection. An extremely beautiful book is "The Tombs of St. Peter and St. Paul," written by Engelbert Kirschbaum. It will be of special interest to all who like Bible archeology.

Income tax time is coming close and we have two new publications published by the Internal Revenue Service of the Treasury Department. One is called "Tax Guide for Small Businesses" and the other is "Your Federal Income Tax." Both should be useful. There has been great interest in the launching of missiles and Martin Gaidin has written an interesting book about this subject which he calls "Spaceport USA." This sheds new light on our missile program and is a most absorbing book.
One of our best nature writers is Edwin Way Teale. His latest book is called "Adventures in Nature" and is well worth reading. There is a great interest in books on how to speak

and how to write. Dr. Wilfred Funk is the author of a new title called "25 Magic Steps to Word Power" which will be most useful for those who are searching for new ways to express themselves.

Each year a selection of the best short stories of the previous year is published under the title of "The O. Henry Awards." Mary Stegner is the editor of this year's collections and it should be of great interest to those who like this type of writing. Emily Hahn is the author of many absorbing books about the Far East. Her latest title is "The Tiger House Party" and it is concerned with many of the fabulously wealthy Maharajas of India.
Many years ago when Admiral Byrd made his first trip to the South Pole, he was accompanied by a Boy Scout named Paul Siple. It is most fitting that this year which marks the 50th anniversary of the Boy Scout movement, should see the publication of a book by Paul Siple. It is called "90 Degrees South" and tells about his experiences as a member of Admiral Byrd's party.

Many parts of the world are in turmoil and unrest and two new books have just been released which explain some of the trouble. One is "The Revolt in Tibet" by Frank Morgan and the other is "Algeria in Turmoil" by Michael K.
Clark. Both of these books will be of interest to the student of current affairs. A book for which we have had many requests is "The Great Importer" by Robert Crichton.
It is the biography of Ferdinand Waldo Demera and relates one of the most exciting impostures of all time. One of the outstanding modern writers about the Civil War is Bruce Catton. His latest book is called "Grant Moves South" and adds much to our knowledge of the period.

The young adult readers of the library have not been neglected during the past week.
Several titles have been added to their collection. "McCall's Guide to Teenage Beauty and Glamour" by Betty Krutler will find a ready audience. Marjorie and C. H. R. Quennell have just issued a new book called "Everyday Life in Prehistoric Times" which will be very useful to students. An interesting biography about one of the early scientists is "Doctor Paracelsus" by Sidney Rosen. E. M. Rosen is the author of a biography called "Patriot Doctor," which is the story of Benjamin Rush, who lived at the time of the American Revolution. Dorothy Ross has written an interesting biography of her own life in the far West called "Stranger in the Desert."
A very valuable addition to our reference collection is "Illustrations of Children's Books, 1946-56" compiled by the Horn Book magazine.

There is a great interest in books on how to speak
and how to write. Dr. Wilfred Funk is the author of a new title called "25 Magic Steps to Word Power" which will be most useful for those who are searching for new ways to express themselves.

Fresh Story, Written In Compact Prose

THE CENTER OF THE GREEN. By John Boken.
McDowell, Obolensky. $3.50.
"The people concerned," according to the title of the very practical first chapter of this novel, are the colonel, Justin Baker, retired to Devonshire; his wife Teresa who, though without the rank, aggressively fills the colonel's shoes; two of their sons, Charles, working for a small trade paper and living alone in Holland Park, and Julian, employed at an advertising agency, married to Penny and living in Putney; Julian's landlord Mr. Monney and his teen-age daughter Betty, who is scandalously far along bearing Julian's baby.
Just before Julian goes off to an editorial meeting, the office boy Alfred warns him that his sister Betty is going to tell "our Dad." That

Art's Argument: Year The Public Nay The Artists

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE ARTIST. By Jacques
Maritain. Scribners. $2.95.
There has always been an unstable relationship between the freedom loving artist and the society he lives in.
We tend to think the two separated only in modern times, when the painter, poet, novelist, and composer, turning modernist, withdrew huffily into a fantastically incomprehensible limbo from a society that disdained to understand them. But the creative spirit in all ages has been often at odds with its contemporary world, and Plato, as Maritain reminds us, wanted poets banned — was Stalin any more tyrannical?

Maritain's little book, based on his lectures at Princeton in 1951, differentiates between the morality of the artist and the morality of man.
"Art is intent on the good of the work, not on the good of man," he says perspicuously, whereas "morality is intent on the good of man, not on the good of the work."
He admits that making a man very very good is a guarantee he will be a creative genius. He would protect society against his aberrations by educating the public and letting the public exert "spontaneous pressure" or organized and group pressure on him when he rebels.

You see where the lecturer-author's sympathy lies from the very start, in his title.
He is discussing the responsibility of the artist, not of society toward the artist. But except in cases of outright obscenity, handled adequately by police, society's attitude toward the artist has certainly been as bad as the artist's toward society — this would be the artist's reply to Maritain; and he could point to no end of masterpieces to which society at first was hostile but about which it changed its mind. Thus society in general will be apt to agree with this author, and the artist, to quarrel with him.

'Twas Worth The Wait For This Book

By Bruce Catton. Little, Brown. $6.50.
It is more than nine years since the late Lloyd Lewis gave us "Captain Sam Grant," a brilliant beginning on a projected three-volume biography of Ulysses Simpson Grant. Nine years are a long wait between volumes, but "Grant Moves South" makes it worth while.

Catton has drawn upon the Lewis notes, his own previously acquired and not inconsiderable knowledge of Grant, and new research in this continuation of a work that promises to be definitive.
It subtiles still were in fashion, this volume could well be tagged "The Education of a General." It is the story of Grant's formative years in military command, of his progress from the un-tutored colonel of Illinois Volunteers to the assured and confident conqueror of Vicksburg. He learned a great deal from 1861 to 1863 — your enemy may be as afraid as you are; when two forces of equal strength meet, the advantage goes to him who hits first; an enemy should not be underestimated. Most importantly, he learned the lesson that brought him final victory at Appomattox — the opposing army, not the occupation of territory, is the objective.
The lessons did not come easily. They might not have been learned at all had Grant been anything but the unpretentious, honest, persevering man that he was. His own native characteristics were tremendous factors in his military evolution.
Catton tells of Grant's battles — with Confederate formen, with rival Union commanders and with Washington — and tells of them with real skill, but his emphasis always is upon Grant as a personality, a rare personality and one we come to respect and honor as the full lines of the portrait emerge.
"Grant Moves South" is Bruce Catton at his best, and that is a very good best, indeed.

throws such a fright into Julian that he runs away from the office, from Penny and Betty, from all his responsibilities. At the same time Charles finding this world too lonely and boring, takes too many sleeping pills. But he wakes up in hospital; and he and his brother, each unknown to the other, report in Devonshire where, if not their father and mother together, at least their bossy mother alone is accustomed to binding up their wounds.
Fate is harshest in the old man, but he reacts with style, as he says, and style for him is all that counts. Julian has the habit of running away, and also the habit of prom-iscuity which repeatedly gets him into scrapes he must run away from. There are promises to try harder, and poor Teresa, though she suffers the least shock, is finally the most inconsolable.

With JOHN CALE

Musical highlight of the week was Thursday's evening performance of the Northeast Louisiana State College Trio. The pianist, violinist and cellist making up the group live here but turn out a musical product rivaling that of top professionals.

In their first appearance this season, Mesdames Elizabeth Martin and Eloise Stanhope — cellist and pianist — and violinist Eloy Fominyan played selections by Beethoven, Shostakovich and Brahms.

A chamber music audience of expected dimensions — about 125 persons — attended. With this small number scattered throughout Brown Hall auditorium, the players gave the impression of having to concentrate rather than play naturally from their parts.

Since a greater part of the enjoyment of hearing and performing chamber music is the conversational atmosphere of a small recital room, the auditorium in the Fine Arts building on the campus would have been a better site for this program. Apparently the 210 seats in the smaller hall will accommodate all chamber music fans in the area for some years to come.

SELECTIONS
The opening Beethoven "Trio in B Flat" offered nothing beyond the usual early works of this composer until the final movement. Here a tune from a long-forgotten opera was used as the basis for a set of humorous variations. The NLSU Trio carried this out in true ad lib fashion. A few listeners noted a similarity to "You Are My Sunshine," by a Louisiana composer of more recent years.

The remaining numbers, the "Trio, Opus 67" by Shostakovich, and the "Trio in C Minor" by Brahms, were better adapted to the larger auditorium for the most part. While some of the novel effects of the high overtones and modernistic harmonies in the Shostakovich were lost, the Brahms selection came through with adequate sonority to reach the audience.

IN PROGRESS

With the Monroe Little Theatre's "Sabrina Fair" now in progress at the Selman Field Playhouse, the Louisiana Tech series will turn to Shakespeare this week. Slated for two performances Wednesday at Howard Auditorium is a full company production of "Taming of the Shrew," by the Canadian Players.
Curtain times were set for 2:15 and 8:00 p.m.

ON THE PLATTER

Occasionally the Scales have to pull a strip from the celluloid trail of the movies or a groove from the hi-fi and stereo column for reference.

While the "payola" investigations may give many skeptics the idea that most recorded tunes these days are below par, the western ditty "El Paso" must be given due praise.

This capsule "shoot-em-up" is a classic both in content and quality. Nothing is left dangling at the end or overdone in the middle. The "comments" by the guitar as the singer unfolds his lengthy ballad are as nearly perfect as popular music dares to be.

If rock and roll has given way to the likes of this miniature western on wax, an era of better pop tunes is in store.

Manufacturers Trying To Give What Cigarette Smokers Want

By RIP WATSON
AP Business News Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—They said it couldn't be done, that it was a real thinking man's cigarette with dual filtration, high-porosity paper and just a hint of mint, mild and outstanding while it travels the smoke further.

This jumble of current advertising slogans dramatizes the sweeping changes that have taken place in the multibillion-dollar cigarette industry in recent years. Cigarette makers don't know what the future will bring, but they're trying to get ready for whatever the nation's army of 38 million smokers demand.

Change always has been the law of life in the tobacco industry. In colonial America, snuff overtook pipe tobacco as the reigning favorite and was followed in turn by chewing tobacco in the early 1800s, by cigars in the latter half of the 19th century and by cigarettes early in this century.

This pattern of change accelerated in recent years as the industry vigorously disputed evidence associating cigarette smoking with cancer. Filter-tip cigarettes skyrocketed from a little over 1 per cent of the market in 1952—the year before the first health scare—to a shade over 50 per cent in 1959, according to figures compiled for Printers' Ink magazine by Harry M. Wooten, recognized as an authoritative industry analyst.

Menthol cigarettes, a filter offshoot given a big push starting in 1956, climbed to 10 per cent of the market by 1959 and are expected to grab 20 per cent. Another tangerine was the high filtration type of cigarette, with a variety of brands all claiming the lowest amount of tar.

Most of these gains came at the expense of the regular size, unfiltered brands which dominated the market until the early '50s. While five of these accounted for 90 per cent of the market 10 years ago, regulars now make up less than half of the market. R. J. Reynolds' Camel, a hardy veteran dating back to 1913, clung to the top spot in 1959, according to Wooten's figures, and chalked up a small gain in sales.

But king-size Pall Mall was moving up fast in second place and another industry survey, by Business Week magazine, had Pall Mall taking the No. 1 spot. More important, Winston, the leading filtertip brand, was third. Kent (filter) was fifth, Salem (menthol) seventh, L & M (filter) eighth, Viceroy (filter) ninth and Marlboro (filter) tenth. Lucky Strike managed to hold fourth and Chesterfield sixth, but sales of these regular brands were off from 1958.

Long noted for their close-mouthed competitive approach, the cigarette firms aren't anxious to say what they'll feature next after emphasizing tobacco, extra size and filters in succession. It's noteworthy, however, that Liggett high filtration entry (Duke), stressed its king-size filter.

American Tobacco Co. stresses research and gradual improvement in the quality of cigarette tobacco for several decades. Lewis Gruber, chairman of the board of P. Lorillard Co., has said the trend in the rapid growth of menthol and mint is not to other flavors but to more menthol and mint.

Perhaps symbolizing the changing yet unchanging tobacco industry, Dr. Henry Lardy, a University of Wisconsin biochemistry professor, has experimented with a cigarette filter made up of two-thirds parmesan cheese and one-third charcoal. The cheese is new all right, but the Tobacco Institute Inc. of Washington, D.C., noted in an industry review that a crude type of cigarette developed by the Aztecs was rubbed with charcoal.

A look at the balance sheets shows that the industry pattern of new types and brands is highly successful. Wooten figures that consumption per capita—15 years of age and over—in 1959 came to 188 packs, a gain of 15 per cent over 1949. The tobacco institute estimated total consumer expenditures on tobacco, mostly on cigarettes, at $6,800,000,000 last year compared with $4,272,000,000 in 1949.

Joseph F. Cullman president of Philip Morris Inc., figures that the industry chalked up its third consecutive sales record, and fifth consecutive sales increase, in 1959.

1959. As for profits, the five largest publicly owned companies showed healthy gains from 1952 to 1958. Lorillard's net income as a percentage of sales doubled, 2.8 to 5.6 per cent, while Reynolds rose from 3.6 to 6.5 per cent, American tobacco from 3.2 to 5.6 per cent and Liggett & Myers from 3.5 to 5.6 per cent. Only Philip Morris Down from 4.2 to 3.9 per cent, shows a decline on this yardstick.

These five accounted for 88.8 per cent of the market in 1959. Cullman predicts consumption this year will reach half a trillion cigarettes. Both he and Wooten point out the industry stands to profit from an increase in the population of smoking age—thanks to the World War II and post-war baby crop. And Gruber contends that filter brands attract virtually all new smokers as they enter the market.

None of the companies professes to be worried that the multiplicity of brands—117 at a recent count—might confuse consumers. American Tobacco notes that in 1953 there were 2,124 brands. The company adds that the number of different types of cigarette given active promotion depends primarily on the variation of demand by the smoking public.

Gruber predicts a "shaking out" which will leave five or six brands to dominate the mass market on a relatively stable basis.

While introduction and promotion of new brands is expensive, several firms point out this is compensated for by increased volume. Philip Morris reports that Marlboro returned its original investment within a year after national distribution.

How much does it cost to market a new brand on a national scale? Philip Morris estimated the cost at four million dollars. Brown & Williamson budgeted 12 million dollars for 1959 introduction of its high filtration brand, Life.

Not all the new ideas pan out.

of course. A case in point is the "little cigars" type of cigarette, which got a big push early in 1959. Smokers simply didn't take to them in large numbers, however, and they were quietly dropped. Cigarette makers concluded that the market for small cigars did not warrant mass promotion.

Students of semantics may or may not find significance in the change from British names such as Pall Mall, Chesterfield, Kent and Marlboro in the christening of new brands introduced in the latter part of 1959. Except for Duke, these had names like Life, Philip Morris, Alpine, Lorillard's Spring, American Tobacco's Riviera and Brown & Williamson's Belair.

Student of the cigarette industry definitely found great significance, however, in the fact that Duke and Life are high-filtration brands.

Jack Paar Relenting At Decision

NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Paar, relaxed by a steam bath and a good night's sleep, relented somewhat Saturday and said he might return to television on a once-a-week basis.

The comedian, who walked out on his National Broadcasting Co. show last Thursday, told newsmen he preferred to do a "person-to-person" type interview show with plenty of travel.

But, he said, in answer to a reporter's question, he might be willing to return to "The Jack Paar Show" once a week.

"The whole thing is in the hands of my agents—the Music Corp. of America," Paar said.

Saturday afternoon Paar took his 10-year-old daughter Randy to see the Broadway play, "The Miracle Worker." He had planned to see the play for some time.

Industry sources believe the dispute between Paar and the network might be settled—by phone—on Monday. Paar denied reports that he was feuding with NBC's President Robert Kintner or board Chairman Robert W. Sarnoff.

So far, however, he has refused to talk to NBC over his walkout. And the NBC executive who decided to cut out the anecdote that caused all the trouble, said he'd do it again.

Ernest Lee Jahneke Jr., head of the network's newly established Department of Standards and Practices, said his decision was based solely on the question of good taste. "I did it and I'd do it again."

Paar became angry Wednesday when NBC cut the 42-year-old comedian's story concerning a misunderstanding over the initials "W.C.," which mean water closet in Britain. The initials' confusion with "wayside chapel" was the crux of the joke.

NBC filled the 4-minute, 52-second gap with a news report.

DOESN'T CHANGE HABITS

LONDON (UPI)—Publicity about the possible harmful effects of smoking does not change people's smoking habits, the British medical magazine Lancet reported Friday.

The magazine took a survey in Edinburgh, Scotland, and said that after an intensive anti-smoking campaign there the proportion of non-smokers did not increase.

The Franklin Stove was invented by Benjamin Franklin in 1717. It was a portable iron fireplace that protruded into the room and gave much more heat than recessed fireplace.

SIDNEY C. ORY

Ory To Address Insurance Group At Meeting Here

The annual banquet and ladies' night of the Monroe Association of Life Underwriters will include a program of cajun stories and philosophy by a speaker from Lafayette, according to Paul Landers, president.

Guest speaker at the occasion, set for 7 p.m. Thursday at the Paragon Club will be Sidney C. Ory. A life and qualifying member of the "Million Dollar Roundtable," Ory was also named Lafayette's outstanding citizen for 1959. He spoke at a similar occasion in Honolulu, Hawaii last year, Landers said.

Crowds Gather Near Palace

LONDON (AP)—Crowds come early and linger late outside Buckingham Palace awaiting the birth of Queen Elizabeth II's baby.

They pace up and down, the way the guards did before they retired behind the palace railings.

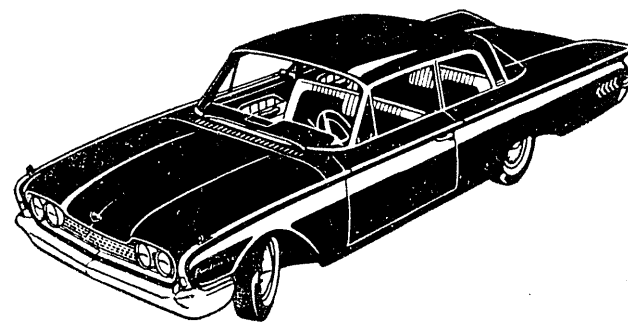

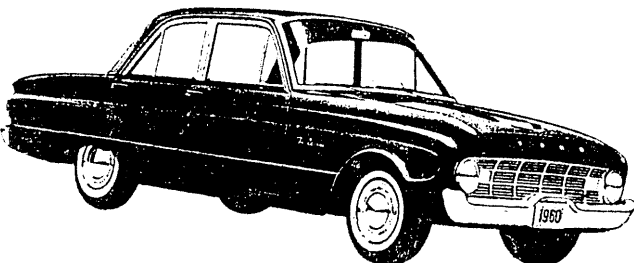

They stroll across the road to the park. They kill time watching television and newsreel crews setting up cameras that point to the palace.

Most of last week there was something to see. The Queen, soon to become a mother for the third time, often has gone out for a drive.

CUTTING DOWN ON HELP

NEW YORK (AP)—More and more Broadway playwrights are agreeing with the economic restraints of theatrical producers. In plotting their stage stories they are cutting down on the number of players and the changes of scenery needed.

Newest in this trend is "Under the Yum Yum Tree," a comedy by Lawrence Roman which demands a cast of only four people. It is a love story placed in San Francisco today.

HERE'S WHAT IS SAID ABOUT FALCON NATIONALLY!

Unquestionably the most successful of the new "compacts" so far is Ford Motor Co.'s Falcon, which many industry officials feel certain will sell 500,000 units this year—and beat conventional cars with no sticking points.

Early publicity had led buyers to believe a bit surprised by the amounts they paid.

MOST DON'T President Not Eyeing Veep Post

"Unemployed Presidents"
Editor's Note: The Justice Department has ruled that a president could run for vice president after serving his maximum two terms in the White House. The following dispatch discusses the attitude of various American chief executives toward post-White House employment.

By ROBERT J. SERLING
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) Dwight Eisenhower says he isn't interested in being a vice president after he leaves the White House — and he has plenty of company in that view.

Most American presidents, with a few notable exceptions, have preferred a life of quiet rest and retirement after serving in the world's toughest job. And they definitely wanted no lesser public post after tasting the glory of the presidency.

"It would be unseemly to take order to stay strong—so we can stay free."

Bridges and Symington appeared with two other senators, one a Republican and one a Democrat, and military experts on a filmed TV program, "The Missile Race," in the NBC network's "Worldwide 60" series.

Sen. Prescott Bush (R-Conn.) said "I certainly don't think the nation is safe, and I don't think we're going to be safe for a long time to come. Because there isn't anything that can stop an attack—a launching of intercontinental ballistic missiles from Europe, if they want to launch them—and nothing can stop them landing here."

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) who said we're behind the Soviet Union, added: "The people of the United States are not getting the facts. We've got good long-range missiles—good short-range missiles—we have a good new air plane in the B58—but we're not in a defensive position—I believe that we are building a deterrent."

ing impeachment by that body while he was president. John Tyler, after he served as president, was a member of the Confederate Congress.

William Howard Taft became Chief Justice of the United States following his presidential term, but he always felt the court post was as much of an honor if not greater than the presidency itself.

Then governor Thomas Dewey of New York once wanted to name former President Herbert Hoover to the U.S. Senate, but Hoover declined. Hoover, however, did accept a number of special assignments, including the famous government reorganization commission that bore his name.

There are many political students who feel it is foolish not to utilize the services of men who have acquired wisdom and skill in the presidency. They have proposed making ex-presidents non-voting members of the Senate (an idea heartily supported by former President Truman), or that the out-going chief executive serve as an ex-officio member of his successor's cabinet.

Neither suggestion ever has reached first base, mainly because neither major party rel-

MESSAGE INTERPRETED Ike's Wheat View Discussion Topic

WASHINGTON (AP)—Did President Eisenhower have his fingers crossed when he offered to go along with the Democratic-controlled Congress on more rigid controls as a means of halting overproduction of wheat?

Heretofore, the chief executive and his farm chief, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, have insisted that the problem of the big wheat surplus could be met only by lowering government price supports and ending production control.

They argued that such a program would discourage high-cost producers—a development that would reduce production—and encourage greater use of the grain as livestock feed—a course that would enlarge markets.

But Congress has refused to go along with such a program, con-

Solon Gives View On U.S. Military Power

NEW YORK (AP)—A Republican senator said Saturday night this country has the most powerful military offense in the world. A Democratic colleague said we're lagging in the missile race because we refuse to spend the money to equal Soviet production.

Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH), who said the United States militarily is second to none, added: "I think the United States government today, as a result of the action of this administration, has put national security ahead of all other matters."

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) who said we're behind the Soviet Union, added: "The people of the United States are not getting the facts. We've got good long-range missiles—good short-range missiles—we have a good new air plane in the B58—but we're not in a defensive position—I believe that we are building a deterrent."

Boys Found After Hunt In Snow

SILSBEE, Tex. (AP) — "They were under an old tree half covered with snow. When the older boy saw my lantern, he just cried, 'Daddy, daddy.'"

R. C. Watts, 19, Friday told his story of finding two little boys, half frozen and suffering from exposure, under a tree during a driving snow storm.

The boys, Roger Dale McGallion, 9, and his brother, Clifford Wayne, 7, left their farm home near here about 5 p. m. to search for some stray cows. They became lost in the snowstorm, and a party of 200 persons searched the heavily wooded area around here for hours.

Watts and Rufus McGallion, 12, the youngsters' cousin, found the boys at 8:10 p. m.

"I heard the older boy crying, and I ran over to him," Watts recalled.

"The little boy was sleeping on the ground. He had given up. I woke him up, and I made both of them walk about three miles till we got some help.

"The little boy wanted to go to sleep but we kept pushing him on. The snow was still falling, and it was 12 to 14 inches deep where we were walking.

"All they wanted to do was see their mother and go home and go to bed.

"They cried part of the time we were walking because they were cold," Watts said.

The two boys were taken to Hardin County Hospital at Kountze.

Early today hospital authorities said Clifford Wayne was in serious condition from overexposure to cold. The older boy's condition was said to be much improved.

G. O. McGallion, 65, father of the boys, suffered a heart attack while searching for them. He was found in a field near his home about midnight, several hours after his attack. He was released from the hospital early today.

AMATEUR RAILROADERS

LYNDHURST, N. J. (AP) — Though the day of the commuter railroad may be ending, there's a railroad here that is looking for more passengers and doesn't charge one penny.

The railroad runs on 722 feet of track raised three feet above the ground. The locomotives are one-twelfth scale and are real coal-eating, steam-driven engines. They are built by amateur engineers from miles around who call themselves "Eastern Live Steamers." The engines can pull 12 grown men—and even more children—at a time.

Circumstances Justify Faith In Jetliners

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer of the following dispatch is one of the nation's leading authorities on commercial aviation, a pilot himself and the author of a number of books on the subject.

By MARTIN CAIDIN

(Written for UP)

If the airline industry of the United States felt that its pre-jet age predictions bordered on the optimistic, it has good reason to wonder at its own reticence.

With the first year of major domestic jet travel now a fact, even the most optimistic expectations have been exceeded in the performance of the great jet airliners. In terms of speed, comfort and distance, the 707 jet airliner has earned the praise of both its users and its passengers. In terms of safety, the jet is the most cheering thing that has happened to commercial flying in years.

As of the end of January, 83 of the Boeing jets were in service. They had flown a total of 121,300 hours, or 52,000,000 miles, and carried the amazing total of 2,355,000 persons — without a single accident.

By 1961, American jetliners—the Boeing 707, Douglas DC-8, and Convair 440 and 600—may be flying as many as 400,000 to 500,000 persons a week.

ALMOST BEYOND BELIEF

In terms of safety, the 707 jets are almost beyond belief. In its first 4,000 hours of jet flight, Continental Airlines operated with a perfect engine reliability record. There wasn't so much as a single engine failure. On the basis of this performance, the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) states that the jet airplane was more than 20 times as reliable as the piston-engine airplane.

Another airlines in its first five months of operation completed 99.3 per cent of all scheduled mileage with the jet airliner. It flew a total of 48,350 hours of flight with no engine failures and only two shutdowns — a precautionary measure to prevent failure of, or damage to, an engine.

The FAA says the 707 jet engines have "almost fantastic" reliability. In 10 months, Pan American flew 64,000 engine hours, with no failures, and only five deliberate shutdowns. In this period, flying six jetliners, PAA made 1,273 Trans-Atlantic flights carrying nearly 130,000 passengers.

In the early days of commercial jet flight, concern was expressed about FOD (Foreign Object Damage). What would happen if the powerful jet engines sucked in objects? Would they explode or burn? Would the airplane be crippled? These things worried people.

GIVEN TOUGH TEST

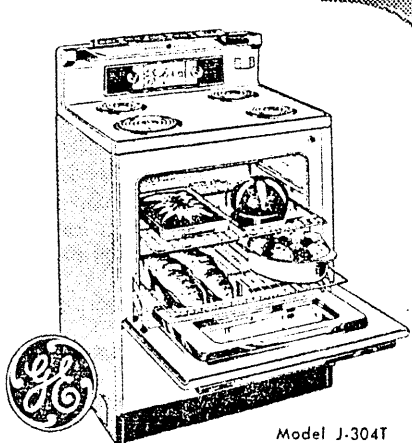

In a series of tests the Pratt & Whitney Co. ran an engine to high speed. They then hurled into the intake several chunks of glass, a twisted jacket, three mechanics' hammers, a pair of pliers, a file, a chisel, a jack-knife, a length of iron chain, a roll of tape, pilots' headphones, and an assortment of nuts, bolts and ball bearings. These also tossed into the engine several species of duck, gull and crow.

No appreciable damage resulted — and the engine still ran! In the first 20,000 hours of operation with the 707, the P. & W. jet engines proved almost free of damage from foreign objects. Only four engines were removed from service; one of these was "feathered" by a large bird that lost a take off race with the jet airliner.

With the new speed of the jet age has come unprecedented engine reliability, strength of metal, and superb design. Both the Boeing 707 and the Douglas DC-8 have had their problems, but these were of a minor nature — hydraulic lines, glass, valves, etc. — and were much less than expected. Compared to the piston-engine airliners like the DC-6, Constellation and Stratocruiser, when they first appeared, the big jets have been miraculously free of trouble.

CORVAIR HANDLES BETTER, STEERS MORE EASILY, RESPONDS MUCH MORE QUICKLY AND HOLDS THE ROAD MORE SECURELY THAN ANY STOCK FOUR-DOOR SEDAN EVER MADE IN THE U.S.

If you think we're enthusiastic about the revolutionary Corvair, leaf through the leading automotive, sports and science magazines and see what the experts are saying. The quote above (by Jim Whipple of Car Life) and those below will give you a good idea how they're greeting the car that "represents the greatest collective engineering change made in any American automobile in the past 40 years."

"Corvair's steering is so light that at parking speeds it feels power assisted; it is so precise as to be absolutely without play, and it is fast enough to allow complete control over every situation. . . . Judged by itself, the steering system is among the finest I have ever had the pleasure to handle."

—Karl Ludvigsen, Sports Cars Illustrated

"Most surprising thing to me outside of the excellent handling characteristics was the feeling of roominess inside. I didn't realize how small the car was until I got out, because I didn't have the sensation of driving a small car and the headroom was greater in the Corvair than in some standard size cars. . . ."

—L. H. Houck, Automotive News

"The car steers like a feather and is extremely quick. . . . This is a beautifully designed automobile, engineered by real pros. . . ."

—Tom McCahill, Mechanix Illustrated

"So far as shopping goes, the Corvair is a housewife's dream. It's small and easily maneuvered without any power steering, and so easily parked. . . . it's a lot easier to unload a cart full of groceries into a front trunk at the supermarket than it is into a rear one."

—Rosemary Francis, Popular Science

"I want to state as firmly as I can that the Corvair handles as beautifully and is as safe as—if not safer than—any family car on the road today."

—Jim Whipple, Car Life

experienced. It almost seems that there is no engine, and the general effect is so quiet as to be almost unanny."

—John R. Bond, Road & Track

"The Corvair must be driven to be fully appreciated. No written word can suffice for the genuine pleasure that you will receive behind the wheel of America's newest and most advanced contribution to transportation. . . . It is a great car."

Hoover Gives Ideology View

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Herbert Hoover said yesterday that Marxist ideology has infected "both the thinking of our people and the actions of our own government."

Communists are bent on destroying freedom, he said, "and they are succeeding right on our very doorstep."

The 85-year-old Hoover, in an address prepared for a luncheon meeting of United Presbyterian Men, a lay organization, said more Christian leaders need to recognize and resist "the spread of the Karl Marx virus."

"This infection creeps through our nation by deluded and misled men and by disguised organizations, fronts and cults," he said.

"These agents of infection are like hermit crabs which crawl into such terms as 'liberal,' 'progressive,' 'public electric power,' 'managed economy,' 'the welfare state' and others."

He said the nation faces "six dangerous crises," including: international Communist imperialism, Marxist infection at home, inflation, faltering foreign trade, corrupt labor power, a slump in American morals.

"The American way of life has proved to be pretty tough," he said. "It needs to be even tougher right now."

"I have lived a long life, and I have seen our nation rally, exert its strengths to surmount dangers as great as those which beset us now."

Hoover, the country's 31st president, offered this summary of perils:

"We have in the Communist nations implacable enemies, whose determination—despite their disguises of peaceful cooperation—is to destroy and dominate the free world."

"And they are succeeding at our very doorstep."

"We are not only plagued with their conspiracies, but with the infection of Karl Marx in both the thinking of our people and the actions of our own government.

"We are in a crisis of inflation which steadily saps the earnings and savings of our people."

"We are in a crisis in our foreign trade—in which competition and an unfavorable trade balance cause the flight of our capital from fear of the stability of the dollar."

"We are in a crisis of the domination of some labor unions by hoodlums; and the use of their gigantic funds to influence elections."

"We are in the midst of an increasing moral slump as witness the increase in major known crimes."

However, Hoover said, the nation is now 184 years old, "older than any other great representative government in history," and has demonstrated the strength to survive distress.

The former president said, "We have gone through seven wars, with series of crises before and after each one. We have gone through three great inflations, with crises before and after. We have gone through the inevitable depressions from the inflations, with accompanying crises. We have gone through a dozen crises of corruption in government."

Yet, he added, the Bill of Rights still stands, and "we are well fed, well clothed, fairly well housed, and we have the right to kick about any crisis."

As "signs of our moral and spiritual strength," Hoover cited the American overseas aid programs after both world wars, and said the aid kept 1,400,000,000 people from perishing.

He cited growth in American voluntary religious, charitable and community welfare organizations, expanded education which "has practically abolished illiteracy," increased higher education and great advances in medical science.

"We can well respect the accomplishments of Russian technicians," he said. "But let us not forget that they obtained the telegraph, the telephone, the electric lamp, the speaking sound track, the radio broadcast tube, the airplane, atomic and nuclear power from us."

Protest

TOKYO (AP)—Foreign Office sources said today Japan will make a formal protest to the French government over France's explosion of an atomic bomb.

The sources declared the French blast in the Sahara Desert was "most regrettable." They said the protest will be similar to Japan's protests to the United States, Britain, and the Soviet Union when those countries exploded nuclear devices.

'STRANGE THINGS HAPPEN'

Weird Comedy Is New TV Success

By RON BURTON

United Press International HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — ABC-TV went all out this year for a valentine for its viewers and came up with a comedy in a series known for eerie episodes featuring the supernatural.

Vanessa Brown, a down-to-earth and very pretty brunette, was cast in the lead of the Feb. 16 show in the "Alcoa Presents" series.

"Oh, it still has some weird things in it," she said, "but the story is the first comedy in the series. It has a touch of 'Life With Father'—an antiqueness, a precious quality."

Miss Brown, recently returned from her honeymoon with TV director-husband Mark Sandrich, said filming the program had a few thrills not always obvious from the script.

STRANGE HAPPENINGS
"I spent one absolutely terrifying day," she said. "We were in a museum, I and my lover. He's a retired postman and considerably older than I. John Beale came from Connecticut to play the part."

"Anyhow, there we are in the museum, and suddenly a bust of Haydn zooms between us and crashes. I let out a real, genuine feminine shriek. I had no idea it was going to crash like that. We did that scene just once."

The series usually has tales of strange happenings—one dead person's soul turning up in the body of a living person, weird coincidences and many documented adventures in the supernatural. In this show, "The Lovers," the time is 1900 and the place Vienna.

Beale plays a retired postman wooing Miss Brown — Elka Schultorf — against the wishes of her aunt and uncle. The situation creates comedy and some lines from the aunt and uncle such as:

SOLUTION A SECRET

"Don't you think you should be interested in a more active postman, dear? One who is still delivering?"

Every time the lovers try to kiss, something happens. Spiritual doings go on at a great rate in the manner of the usual things in a haunted house. Apparently the aunt and uncle are not involved. The most outstanding instance of ghostly interference is the falling head of Haydn.

How the lovers resolve their problem — what to do about the spirits who oppose their union — is the conclusion of the hour-long play.

"Actually it's not quite an hour," Miss Brown said. "The psychiatric hour runs just 50 minutes."

Union Gets Big Contract

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The International Oil Workers Union, after years of effort, has obtained its first major contract with an affiliate of the world's largest oil company.

Production and maintenance workers at the huge Baytown, Tex., refinery of Humble Oil & Refining Co. accepted a one-year contract negotiated by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (OCAW).

This union for years has courted employees at major installations of affiliates of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey).

The initial breakthrough came last August when it won a collective bargaining election from the Baytown Employees Federation, an independent union that had been in operation 23 years.

Four times previously the employe group had turned back challenges from international unions.

The Baytown victory prompted union officials to announce plans to intensify efforts to unseat similar employe federations at other Jersey installations. The international particularly is eyeing Jersey's huge refineries at Linden, N. J., and Baton Rouge, La.

Jersey's domestic refineries can process over 953,000 barrels of crude daily. The plants at Baton Rouge, Baytown, and Linden account for all but about 155,000 barrels.

Less than half of the 3,200 Baytown workers covered by the new contract will receive wage increases averaging about nine cents an hour. No general wage hike was included but the individual increases resulted from realignment of duties for some mechanical and process job assignments.

The workers received a five per cent increase, however, in early 1959 while the federation was negotiating for a contract to replace one that expired Dec. 5, 1958.

Humble spokesmen say the company's wages and salaries historically have been above those prevailing generally in the industry. They say the company also has been among the leaders in employe benefits.

The average hourly wage at the Baytown refinery has increased over 114 per cent since 1947.

On Jan. 1, 1947, the average wage was $1.41 an hour. Last Jan. 1 the average was $3.02.

On Jan. 1 Jersey Standard lumped its domestic exploration, producing, refining, and marketing operations under one roof with the merger of five affiliates into a new Humble company. The old Texas affiliate of the same name now operates as the Humble division of the new firm.

The Humble division or old Texas affiliate in 1953 had fewer employees than in 1947 but its payroll was 89.8 per cent higher.

The 1957 payroll for 18,023 employees exceeded $70,081,000. The 1958 payroll for 17,600 employees was in excess of $133,033,000.

Other employe benefits in 1958 cost the company $27,932,000, compared to $15,000,000 in 1947.

The Baytown Federation continues to represent some 600 workers, most of them being office employees.

The International Teamsters Union entered last year's collective bargaining election at Baytown but withdrew some two weeks before the OCAW's 1,621-1,196 victory.

The teamsters also have made overtures at the Baton Rouge refinery, largest of the Jersey Standard group.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

J. Paul Kemerer

Monroe friends have received belatedly the news that J. Paul Kemerer, first coach and athletic director at Northeast Louisiana State when it opened its doors as Ouachita Junior College, is dead. Coach Kemerer was associated with the University of Maryland when he died last September 7.

Kemerer, with a background as player and coach in college and pro circles, was chosen as the man to organize the athletic program at Monroe's new college when the school opened for business in 1931. He attended West Virginia Wesleyan and obtained his master's degree from Penn State where he was an assistant coach for a short time. He had a brief fling in pro football before coming to Monroe, and upon leaving here about 1935 he coached at high schools in Pennsylvania until 1950 when he went to Havattsville, Md., where he was in charge of a student driver training program for which he was cited in a national magazine.

He coached all athletics on the old Ouachita Junior College program for 1931-32-33, leaning heavily to football and basketball. He was in charge of the men's physical education program, conducted intramural athletic programs, worked with campus boxing and track and directed the first track event at the college, the "Junior-Senior Meet," that won strong student and city support. In addition he was an instructor in political science.

Kemerer surrendered the head coaching duties to James L. Malone in 1934 as the "Big Indian" fresh from LSU began a 20-year reign as coach. Kemerer served as athletic director for the school year beginning in '34 and then departed for Pennsylvania.

Only Dr. W. R. Hammond and Mrs. Dorothy Younse, still members of the Northeast faculty, were on the school's original faculty roll with Kemerer. Frellsen Smith, now at Louisiana Tech, and Mrs. Bess Crider Penick, Ruston, also were in this first group of instructors.

Mrs. George Anna Kemerer, wife of the ex-coach, who was in charge of the college bookstore when her husband was directing the "original Indians," resides at 8706 23rd Avenue, Adelphia, Md.

Ouachita Football

"Woodlawn" is a new name high school football followers will be getting acquainted with in Louisiana this year. That's the new triple-A member at Shreveport that's supposed to cut deeply into Byrd, or maybe it's Fair Park, enrollment.

Monroe fans will get their look at Woodlawn here September 30 when the Ouachita Parish High Lions tangle with the Shreveport member that replaces Hope, Ark., on the Lions' slate.

Excepting the Woodlawn for Hope change, the schedule announced by Coach Bob Ellen is the same as last season for Ouachita, and once the Lions open play there will be no stopping for an open date as they sweep through ten playing dates.

The schedule shows Jonesboro-Hodge, Sept. 16; Ruston, Sept. 23; Woodlawn, Sept. 30; Bastrop, Oct. 7; Haynesville, Oct. 14; Fair Park, Oct. 21; West Monroe, Oct. 28; Byrd, Nov. 4; Bossier, Nov. 11; and Neville, Nov. 18. Only Ruston, Bastrop, Fair Park, and Bossier will be played away from home. And what of the Ouachita prospects?

The Lions are losing some good boys. Grid careers are over for such as ends Ervin Bates, Tommy Winkler, and Bill Cornett, tackles Bill Solomon, Bill Rambin, and Philip Youngblood; guards Billy Rushing, Bob Knickerbocker, Rayford Haygood, and Danny Duke, center R. W. Kimball, and backs Bobby Hendrix, Woody Mahoney, Bobby Shipp, Harry Crowe, and Bob Saterfield. Fullback Gary Warlick, hurt in a game last year, is out of football, and halfback Herbert Perry, has had a knee operation but is counted on to rejoin the '60 squad.

The Lions have the core for a good team. The rebuilding will be around end Johnny Roach, tackle William Matkins, guards Johnny Butler and Jimmy Lewis, center Don Ellen, quarterbacks James Cromwell and Dennis Warner, halfback Ted Smith, and fullback Rubba Via. David Rawls, a halfback last year, figures strong in Ellen's plans, but this year he's due to work at end. Smith and Via, who should hit around 180 pounds apiece in September, could be high in Ouachita fortunes. Squadmen back will include ends Ernest Loyd and Kenny Hickey, tackles Wince Bass and James Richardson, guard Danny Tousin, and center Donnie Letterman.

A lot will be determined about Ouachita's prospects when Coach Ellen and his staff greet the Lions for spring training the last day in February.

"We've got to fill a lot of gaps with some young kids," Ellen admits. "If they come through they can make the season for us. There are several promising boys up from the freshman team. I think they will help us."

Burke To Visit

Marty Burke, the New Orleans chairman of the state athletic commission, will be a Monroe visitor tomorrow. He'll confer with David C. Silverstein, district boxing and wrestling commissioner, and promoter August Baumgartner in a routine tour of professional wrestling and boxing centers of Louisiana. Burke, himself a onetime heavyweight boxer, was a sparring partner for Jack Dempsey and fought most of the "name" fighters of around 40 years ago.

High School Track

The West Monroe Quarterback Club is bidding for a regulation track for West Monroe cindermen. A resolution asking the Ouachita Parish School Board to provide for a regulation track was adopted by the Quarterbacks at their meeting the past week. Since the parish body also holds the purse on such for Ouachita Parish High, it has been suggested that the same might be provided for the Lions.

Neville High, operating in Monroe independently of the parish system, will be putting its new track into use this spring. Northeast State only recently rebuilt the track the old junior college abandoned about the middle '30s.

Vossler Takes

Panama Lead

PANAMA (AP)—Ernie Vossler of Fort Worth, Tex., fired a 5-under-par 67 Saturday to take undisputed possession of first place in the Panama Open Golf Tournament.

The sub-par performance gave him a three-round total of 204 and broke the deadlock with Stan Dudas of North Hills, Pa. Dudas slipped to a 74 and seventh place with a 54-hole total of 211.

Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., also was 5-under and took over second place, a stroke back over Vossler. Canada's Star Leonard moved up to third with a 208.

Behind Leonard at 209 were defending champion Pete Cooper of Lakeland, Fla., and Bob Watson of Ardsley-On-Hudson, N. Y.

Tribe Cindermen Show Up Well

Aiming for a shot at the big time in the Coliseum Relays at Montgomery, Ala., Saturday, Northeast's high-gear track team turned in a creditable intrasquad showing here yesterday despite snowy surroundings and various ailments of key performers.

Two runners and one distance man missed the workout completely while Dave Styron shook the flu long enough to capture the 60-yard dash and Dick Hays sped through the 880-yard run on a turned ankle.

Styron's sprint boosted Coach Lew Hartzog's contention that the Indian thinclads will be a definite contender for the title at Montgomery. Styron edged twin brother Don to win the short dash in 6.3 seconds, topping the

NEW YORK (AP) — Art Evans, skinny Manhattan College junior, won the 1,000-yard run in 2:13 Saturday night at the New York Athletic Club Games in Madison Square Garden.

Evans moved into the lead on the fourth lap and finished 3 yards in front of Ed McAllister of the NYAC. All through the second half of the six-lap race, only Evans and McAllister had anything to say.

Pete Levin of the NYAC finished third, far back and Jim Brown of New York University was fourth.

McAllister dogged Evans' footsteps right up until the end and in the home stretch was inches up. But Evans had enough left to fight McAllister off.

Lew Merriman, Missouri Valley champion from Wichita, captured the Matt Halpin half mile run in 1:53.8, beating Mike Peake of Santa Clara, Calif., by 2 yards.

Tom Murphy, who the event two years ago, dropped out with two laps to go. He said he had been sick all week, and was ordered by his physician not to run. But he said he thought he might hold up. He is America's No. 1 hope in the Olympic 800 meters.

Art Crichton of St. John's, N.Y., an outsider, won the Buermeyer 500 in :57.6. Josh Culbreath of the Philadelphia Pioneer Club, who won the event last year, could do no better than third. He was nosed out by Kye Courtney of Manhattan, who was about three yards behind the winner.

John Thomas of Boston University, won the high jump with a 7-footer—the 10th of his career—but he failed to clear 7-2 which would have broken his 2-week-old mark of 7-1 1/2. He was close on his first shot, but wasn't near on his second and third tries.

Len Edelen of Minnesota captured the 2-mile in a respectable 8:57.4.

Auburn Nudges LSU, 63 To 61

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Henry Hart went over Louisiana State's zone defense with a deadly one-hand push shot as he led Auburn to a 63-61 Southeastern Conference basketball victory Saturday night.

Auburn's accuracy from the free throw line and the shooting of Hart, who played with a bandage on his left knee, were the difference as LSU made a surprisingly strong showing. Hart wound up with 23 points.

LSU, which used only five men until the last 13 seconds, led 37-33 at the half, but fell behind by some six points midway in the second half as Auburn began connecting with its long set shots.

LSU came on again in the closing minutes and tied the score 50-50. But Auburn again took the lead and wrapped it up when LSU's Ray Lewis committed a foul that sent him out of the game. Ray Groover, fouled on the play, made both free throws and gave Auburn a 63-59 lead.

Caroy Guglielmo, LSU's only substitute, scored a lone field goal in the closing seconds.

Tommy Raborn was the top scorer for LSU with 15 points. Dick Davies had 14 for LSU.

Auburn sank 23 of 43 field goal attempts and LSU made 24 of 53. On foul shots, Auburn made 17 of 22 and LSU 13 of 22. Each team made 30 rebounds.

The victory was Auburn's 14th against three defeats in all competition. LSU is 3-15 for the season. In SEC play, Auburn is 7-2 and LSU 1-7.

Olympic Chief Wants Flags, Hymns Barred

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—President Avery Brundage of the International Olympic Committee Saturday suggested the use of national flags and hymns be abandoned at the Olympic Games.

The proposal, which seems certain to cause world-wide controversy, was made by Brundage in a prepared speech which was met with applause. He was speaking at opening ceremonies of the 56th IOC session in the War Memorial Opera House.

Brundage, from Chicago and no stranger to international controversy said in part:

"A certain degree of national pride in sport accomplishments is no doubt legitimate, but there has been so much trouble recently because of political infringements that I propose to ask the committee to examine the desirability of eliminating the use of national flags and hymns.

"It might be better to use a fanfare of trumpets instead of national hymns in the victory ceremonies, and when the Olympic flag is raised at the opening of the games, perhaps all national flags should be lowered.

Eight Injured, None Critically

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A spectacular, 37-car pileup that sent eight drivers to a hospital provided chilling drama Saturday at the start of the 250-mile race for cars on Daytona International Speedway.

The event, run for 25 of its 100 laps under a caution flag because of rain, was won by Marion (Bubby) Farr of Augusta, Ga., in a 1956 Ford with 1953 Lincoln engine.

The big pileup occurred on the southeast turn of the 2 1/2-mile track as the field of 68 souped-up machines was about to enter the grandstand straightaway on the first lap.

Nobody is certain how it started, but in seconds cars were rolling, tumbling and sliding over the track and into the infield in a tremendous crash of crunching metal.

The first 20 or so cars escaped unscathed, but few of the rest escaped the pileup. The race was stopped immediately.

Three of the drivers taken to Halifax hospital were released after treatment. Four others were held for X-rays and observation, and a fifth later was admitted for similar treatment.

These hospitalized were Jack McLaughlin of Thoratone, N.J.; Bill Wark of Barrington, N.J.; Bill Rader of Clarence Center, N.Y.; Will Kagle of Tampa, and Dick Freeman of Orlando, Fla.

None was injured critically. In another mishap, in a 25-mile consolation race to determine eight additional starters for Sunday's Daytona 500, a car driven by Tommy Irwin of Spartanburg, S.C. plunged into the infield lake. The car sank, but Irwin got out and swam to the shore, uninjured.

The 250-mile race was restarted with 42 cars, some of which were in the crackup but were able to navigate.

The race was for modified and sportsman cars. The sportsman is a car on which engine alterations may be made if these are not visible when the hood is raised. There is no limitation on alterations in the modified car.

Glenn (Fireball) Roberts of Daytona Beach sprinted to the front and gunned his 1955 Ford to a substantial lead before the rain began and the caution flag went up on the 23rd lap. A pace car then led the pack until the 58th lap.

Roberts' average for the first 25 laps was 137.69 miles an hour. It was cut to 122.61 by the 30th lap due to the slowing.

Farr's winning average was 116.61 m.p.h. After the rain-soggy yellow flag came down, Roberts and Farr alternated in the lead as each made pit stops. Farr finally made it when Roberts' car sputtered out of the race on the 84th lap after Roberts had taken the lead.

Farr, 34, is a restaurant operator and movie projectionist, and a former motorcycle racer. This was his first try on the lightning-fast Daytona Speedway with its steeply banked curves.

Carl Burris of Leaksville, N.C., finished second, with Joe Weatherly of Norfolk, Va., third and Sonny Black of Montgomery, Ala., fourth.

A Southwest wind of 22 knots, with gusts up to 28 knots, was a possible contributing factor to the big crackup. Roll bars and straps saved most of the drivers from injury.

The 25-mile consolation race was won by Curtis Turner of Charlotte, N.C., in a 1960 Ford. Ned Jarrett of Newton, N.C., was second, and Elmo Longley of Wheaton, Md., third.

Quast, Hyndman Tourney Champs

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A foul weather finish Saturday brought William G. Hyndman and Anne Quast of Philadelphia and Anne Quast of Philadelphia and Anne Quast of Philadelphia to a 4-and-3 victory over Bob Gardner of New York City and Pat Tierman of Manhasset, N.Y., in the 25th annual National Amateur Mixed Foursomes Golf Tournament.

The first 27 holes were played in winds of about 35 miles per hour. A squall struck at the 27th hole bringing rain that held up play for 15 minutes and continued the rest of the way.

A string of seven consecutive bogeys was the downfall of Gardner, 1956 Metropolitan New York champion, and Miss Tierman, a novice.

They had taken a two-hole lead by the fourth, winning the first hole in par when Hyndman missed a 4-foot putt. Miss Tierman missed a 45-footer to hole the fourth. That was the last hole they won until No. 7, the second time around.

Hyndman and Miss Quast, the women's national amateur champion in 1957, won their first hole on No. 7 where Anne dropped an 18-foot putt for a birdie. The match was squared at the ninth when Gardner was short of the green and Tierman chipped 24 feet past the pin.

Winter Olympics To Open Thursday At Squaw Valley

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (UPI)—The world's greatest winter sports show, the Olympic Games, opens in this snow-covered valley on Thursday with a blast of trumpets, the boom of cannon and the release of 2,000 doves of Peace pigeons.

Valley have been turned into a miniature city, with the usual built-in traffic problems, housing troubles and standing-in-line at restaurants.

But all this will disappear when Vice President Richard Nixon officially opens the games.

Then the realization of four years of hard work will come true for games President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and managing director H. D. Thoreau and thousands of others who have devoted their time and effort to make this VIII Olympiad a success.

White Thursday officially is listed for the "opening" of the athletic competition doesn't start until Friday.

But the thrills will be there on Thursday, too. The U.S. Marine Band, known as "The President's Own," will play for the opening ceremonies—assisted by 1,235 instrumentalists from 52 California and Nevada high school bands. There also will be a choir of 2,415 voices.

Bright and early on Friday morning, the 30-kilometer (about 18 miles) cross-country competition will get under way at McKinney Creek.

At 10 a.m. e.s.t., the same day, the men's downhill competition opens on Squaw Peak; at 10:30 a.m. the pairs figure skating starts in the ice arena; and at 12:30 p.m., 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. there are hockey games scheduled.

And that's the way the heavy schedule will go through the 10 days of actual competition.

With the storms of the last week now just a bad memory. Officials are looking forward again to a big attendance. They are hoping for 25,000 for the opening ceremonies, which hope to average 15,000 a day through the whole competition—which would be an all-time record for these games.

Martin Blatt, assistant managing director of the games, says 3,000 parking spots will be available—some what less than had been anticipated before the storm. But still sufficient. Parking will be on either the "parking pad" or along Highway 40.

Hotels and motels in the area still have some housing available. Some places the prices are very reasonable—others less heavily toward the expensive side.

A festival air blankets the whole area and four years of planning, working and watchful waiting will burst into full bloom with that first blast of trumpets on Thursday.

After the fighting, which started as a pushing contest between Georgetown's Buddy Sheehan and Lafayette's Pete Pavia, Lafayette's Coach George Davidson refused to allow his team to continue.

Referee Curly White awarded the victory to Georgetown after waiting five minutes for the Lafayette club to return to the floor.

Sheehan and Pavia, each 5-foot-9, began swinging at each other about 10 feet in front of the basket. In a few seconds half a dozen players from both sides were flailing away.

The two officials, White and Charley Buck, appeared to have succeeded in stopping the fighting when one of the larger Lafayette players took a swing at Sheehan, who had moved off to the side.

When this happened, about 200 spectators, mainly Georgetown students, poured off the stands and began swinging at Lafayette players.

The Lafayette players were pushed to the floor by the weight of the irate Georgetowners and the flare-up raged out of control for nearly five minutes.

None of the Georgetown team took part in the final melee. Coach Tom Nolan hustled his boys to the bench and raved out with school officials to help stop the fight.

Bill Collins, Ken Venturi Share First At Phoenix

By BOB WOOD
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Burly Bill Collins of Crystal River, Fla., and Ken Venturi of San Francisco shared the third-round lead in the $22,500 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Knicks Halt Big 3, Romp Past Hawks

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Knicks, with Willis Naulls, Kenny Sears and Richie Guerin, held off Bob Pettit, Cliff Hagan and Clyde Lovellette to 41 points and displayed their own offensive power for a 120-104 victory over the Hawks Saturday.

The Knicks, with Willis Naulls and Kenny Sears doing the scoring and Richie Guerin the rebounding, raced to a 42-22 halftime lead in the National Basketball Assn. game. Naulls netted 21 of his 27 points in the first half while Sears scored 16 and Guerin picked up 11 assists.

The Hawks' powerful three who have been averaging 75.2 points against New York this season, sat out most of the second half, when the Knicks piled up a 112 lead. Hagan and Lovellette were limited with 16 points. Pettit had 12.

In the third quarter, New York couldn't miss and St. Louis couldn't hit. The Hawks scored only two field goals in the first eight minutes and fell behind 44-39. The Knicks continued to pile into and increased the margin to 50 at the start of the last period.

Naulls was high scorer with 26. Sears finished with 26. Guerin scored 21 points and had 19 assists, only two shy of the Knicks record.

Rafty Second Amerigo Takes Hialeah Victory

MIAMI (AP)—Amerigo, a 12-year-old, sweet to a length victory in the $91,550 Hialeah Turf Cup Saturday at Hialeah Park.

Amerigo, bred in England and owned by Mrs. Tilton Christopher of Miami, ran the mile and a half in 2:29.15 on the soft grass track, and held off the fast-closing Rafty, North Pole II finished third and Tudor Era fourth in the nine-horse field.

Packing only 114 pounds and ridden by Bill Hartack, Amerigo was second most of the way and caught Tudor Era with less than a half mile to go.

Amerigo paid $3, $2.50 and $2.00. Rafty, owned by the Sanford Stud Farm, paid $2.50 and $2.00. North Pole II, returned $2.00.

Tudor Era, with top weight of 126 pounds, moved to the early and held it until his burden began to tell.

Rafty, a French-bred, was 9 lengths in front of North Pole II and Tudor Era, trying for his second straight Hialeah Turf Cup, was a neck away in fourth.

After the first four came Muscadet, One-Eyed King, Martini II, Impatient II and Sinton in that order. One-Eyed King, only American-bred in the race, was 54 with the crowd of 26,715, but never threatened.

A heavy rain fell shortly before noon and softened the infield grass course.

Heinsohn's 39 Points Rally Celts To Win

BOSTON (AP)—Tommy Heinsohn fired a fourth period Boston comeback Saturday night as the Celtics edged the Wilt Chamberlain-less Philadelphia Warriors 122-120 in a National Basketball Assn. thriller.

Heinsohn, who had 39 points, got 12 of them in the last five minutes when Boston stormed back from a 107-102 deficit.

Paul Arizin was the game's high scorer with 42 points. His accuracy plus Philadelphia's accelerated running game, was the Warriors' consolation for the lack of Chamberlain. The 7-foot-4 giant who is out with facial injuries.

Willie Saunders fouled out of the game at the 7:32 mark of the final as Boston had closed to 109-106. Then Heinsohn tapped in a missed Bill Russell free throw and fed Bob Cousy on a spectacular under-the-basket shot. The Celts led 110-109.

The score changed hands four more times until a Tom Gola free throw tied matters 114-114.

At that point Frank Ramsey hit a 30-footer one-hander. Heinsohn swished a hook and after Ramsey fouled out, Gene Conley tapped in a Cousy miss to put Boston ahead 120-114.

From then the Celts held off the Warriors with Cousy doing a fancy dribbling stall over the final 20 seconds.

The victory lengthened Boston's Eastern Division lead over runner-up Philadelphia to seven games.

Northeast's Track Squad Opens In Coliseum Relays

Northeast Louisiana State College's track team will open its 1960 season next Saturday (Feb. 20) against a host of strong university opponents.

Despite the tough competition, Northeast Track Coach Lew Hart-zog says his squad will be a definite contender for top honors in the Coliseum Relays in Montgomery, Ala.

Florida State University of Tallahassee is the defending champion of the indoor meet and is favoured for the No. 1 finish again this year.

Other entrants include Georgia, Georgia Tech, Auburn, Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi State, Clemson and Mississippi College.

Hartzog, in his third year at the helm of the Northeast track team, seems to be nearing completion of the building program he began in 1958. His mile-relay team already has a victory in New Orleans to its credit.

The Indians also took second spot in the 110-meter high hurdles and third in the sprint relays during the New Orleans track classic. In the 1958 Sugar Bowl meet Hartzog's boys were the surprise winners of the mile relay.

The Indians, 1959 Gulf States Conference track champions, will be led again this year by the sensational Styron twins—juniors Don and Dave. The speedy pair were selected GSC athletes of the year in 1959, the first time the award has ever gone to trackmen.

Hartzog himself, in both his previous years, has been named GSC Track Coach of the Year.

Right now Dave Styron and Jerry Dies, an 18-year-old freshman from Fair Park High in Shreveport, are battling the flu. At the same time senior quarter-miler Dick Hays is hampered by a turned ankle.

However, Hartzog expects these three to be ready for the meet.

But the Northeast track coach is less hopeful about Roger Beumer, who is expected to be a top-flight sprinter in this, his sophomore year. Beumer has a pulled muscle.

Also on the doubtful list is freshman George Abbott from Jonesboro, one of Louisiana's all-time high-school milers with a time of 4:30.4.

Here's the tentative Northeast lineup for the Coliseum Relays:

60-yard dash—Don and Dave Styron plus Beumer, if he's ready.

60-yard low hurdles—The Styron twins and Walker.

Mile run—Don (Budddy) Eiland and Bill Frye. Eiland is a Farmerville sophomore who established himself as one of the deep South's leading distance runners during the cross-country season and is expected to be a top contender in all meets. Frye is a sophomore who showed great improvement during the cross-country season. He placed fifth in the GSC two-mile as a freshman.

880-yard run—Jim Mouser and Hays. Mouser is a junior quarter-miler and a member of the Indians' powerful mile-relay squad. Hartzog considers him as probably the team's hardest worker.

Hays is also a member of the mile-relay team, ran 47.9 in the Southern AAU quarter-mile, won the LSU Invitational and finished second at the Southwestern Rec Meet last year.

Two-mile run—Eiland and Frye.

Mile relay—Entered will be the two-time winners of the Sugar Bowl meet, Dave Styron, Mouser, Hays and Don Styron.

Shot—Roy Rogers, James Copeland and Dyes. Rogers is a 1959 junior-college discuss champion. Copeland is another junior-college transfer who has hit 49 feet with the shot and who Hartzog feels is capable of doing better. Dyes, the Fair Park boy and a half-stater in several events, could be an Olympic prospect.

Pole vault—John Pennel and Casey Boyett. Pennel has vaulted 13'7" in high school and has cleared 14' in practice. Boyett, from Jena, has a best of 12' and needs a year to develop. Hartzog says.

High jump—Dyes, Darryl Walton and perhaps Dave Styron. Walton is a 19-year-old graduate of Istrouma High in Baton Rouge who made all-star as a high jumper. He cleared 6'2" in high school.

Broad jump—Dyes, Owen and perhaps Dave Styron.

In the freshman division Northeast will enter Gene Christen and Bill Koerner in the 60-yard dash. Christen is a 19-year-old freshman sprinter from New Orleans. Koerner is a football half-back who ran 9.9 100 in high school.

Northeast will also enter a mile-relay team in the freshman division. Members will be Christen, Koerner, Jerry Lowry and Chuck Hecker. Lowry is from Los Angeles, 33-248; Walter Beck, from Houston, 37-250; Luman Harris, from Hecker, Hartzog believes he has the potential of a great hurdler.

Defending champion Dick Savitt of New York defeated Mike Green of Los Angeles 6-3, 8-6.

In other opening matches, Earl Buchholz of St. Louis defeated Billy Talbert of New York 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, and Barry MacKay of Dayton, Ohio, defeated Chuck McKinley of St. Louis 11-9, 6-1.

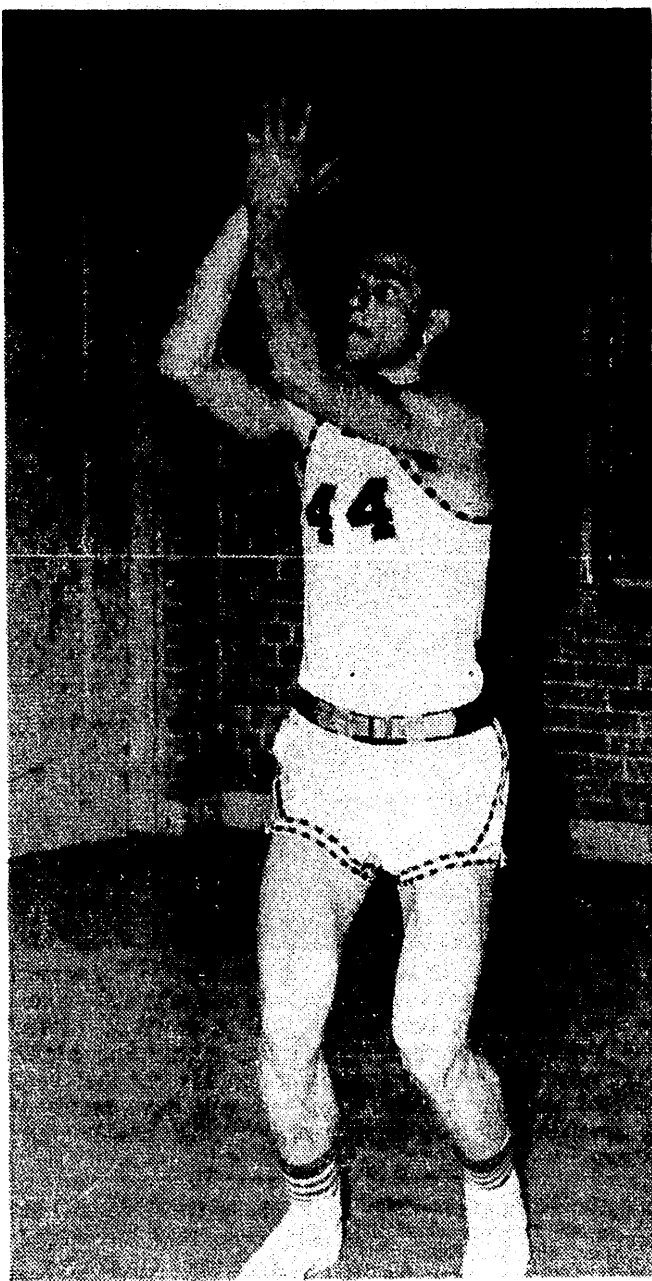

Buchholz will meet MacKay in the opening match of Sunday's semifinals, while Savitt and Dell will meet in the other match.

Bold Brigand Cops Feature

OLDSMAR, Fla. (AP) — Gordon Taylor's Bold Brigand won the $2,500 featured handicap at Sunshine Park Saturday under a stout ride by Ronnie Faitholm.

The winner, coupled with Dadswood, raced the 6 furlongs in 1:14 and paid $11.50 to win.

Bold Brigand streaked under the wire three lengths in front of Wags M. Co Captain was third.

GENE COZINE, a transfer cager from Flat River (Mo.) Junior College, has been one of Northeast's front-line reserve performers this season. A junior, the 6'4" shooter plays both forward and center. He will probably see action in the Indians' next home game against Northwestern Wednesday night.

SAN ANTONIO 'CAP

Bagdad Triumphs In Stretch Duel

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Howard B. Keck's Bagdad, under the guidance of jockey Bill Shoemaker, won the $27,500 San Antonio Handicap Saturday, outlasting the favored First Landing in a stretch duel at Santa Anita.

First Landing had to make up ground on the far turn and wasn't equal to catching the fast-flying Bagdad.

Dark Shoots 82, Clings To Narrow Lead

MIAMI (UPD) — Al Dark, who was bothered by winds and wandering putts, shot 82 Saturday but clung to a one stroke lead in the National Baseball Players' Golf tournament.

Jim Hearn, the ex-Philadelphia pitcher now a free agent, scored 79 and crept up to a three-day total of 226 behind Dark's 225.

As evidence of the effect of the bad weather on the playing baseball players, Albie Pearson's 79 was as good as any score recorded in the active major league division. That gave him third place at 229.

Next came Al Lopez, Chicago White Sox manager, with 80-223; Lee Walls, Cincinnati, 80-225; and John Gray, Philadelphia, 79-225.

Gray had the only other 79.

Three players, Miami Marlins Manager Al Vincent, Fred Hutchinson of Cincinnati and Julian Morgan of Chicago, all had 228.

Wind gusts up to 40 miles an hour struck the Miami Springs Country Club course and a noon downpour routed the tail end of the field.

"I can't blame it all on the weather," Dark said. However, "I was putting rather poorly."

He was seven over par on the front nine and five over on the back. He panned only seven holes, and did not score a birdie.

Other scores in the major league division were:

Several Being Considered For Fla. Cage Post

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Athletic Director Ray Graves said Saturday "several" persons were being considered as a successor to John Mauer as basketball coach at the University of Florida.

But he added through a spokesman that no final decision had been reached.

The Charleston (S.C.) Evening Post said Norman Sloan, basketball coach at The Citadel, admitted he had been contacted about the job. A Jacksonville sports writer earlier named Sloan as the top candidate for the position.

However, an athletic department spokesman said nothing had been decided.

Graves was out of town for talks in Orlando and other cities and was unavailable for further comment.

Boston Takes 7-6 Triumph Over Montreal

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins built a three-goal cushion in a span of less than 3½ minutes early in the first period Saturday for a wild, 7-6 victory over first place Montreal in a National Hockey League game.

Ab McDonald, who had managed just four goals in 53 games, scored three for the Canadians, while Bronco Horvath, the NHL's top goal scorer, counted a pair for the Bruins, his 36th and 37th, and also added his 37th assist.

It was Vic Stasiuk at 3:09 of the first period, Horvath at 5:53 and then Guy Gendron at 6:35 in Boston's quick assault on Montreal goalie Jacques Plante.

The frantic first period ended with Boston ahead 5-3.

McDonald also assisted on Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion's goal at 10:41 of the final period when the Canadians closed the gap to 7-6.

From then on the Bruins scrambled against Montreal power and speed. Boston goalie Harry Lumley made two key saves in the last 2 minutes and finished with 27.

Horvath assisted on Stasiuk's goal, then connected on his own rebound. In the second period he displayed his wrist-snap scoring special on a wide angle blast which found the far corner of the net. It came on a perfect pass from Don McKenney, who had two assists and set a Boston season record in that department.

McKenney now has 40, beating the previous high of 39 he shared with Coach Bill Schmidt.

Montreal was without three of its top scorers, with Jean Beliveau, Dickie Moore and Marcel Bonin all sidelined by injuries. Boston played without ace defenseman Doug Mohns and pesky winger Fiem MacKell, also out with injury.

Elliott Loses 2nd Race In Three Years

MELBOURNE, (AP) — World champion miler Herb Elliott lost a major race for only the second time in three years Saturday. He trailed Tony Blue by three yards in the Victorian half-mile championship.

Elliott passed it off as something to be expected at this stage of a training program geared to the Olympic Games next summer. But he scratched from the three-mile race later in the day.

Blue, who recently ran a half mile in 1:43.6, breaking Elliott's Australian record, made up a four-yard deficit in the last 220 yards. He flashed past Elliott 30 yards from the finish and won easily. His time was 1:49.2 after a slow 57.5 first quarter.

"I ran 1:49.3. That is very pleasing at this stage of my preparation," Elliott said. "Now I feel I'm ready to run a reasonable mile next Saturday."

Elliott's only other major defeat in the past three years came in a half-mile race during his 1953 European tour. He has raced the distance only 15 times and his best is 1:47.3.

After withdrawing from the three-mile, Elliott explained: "It would not do me any good. It would not give me any indication of how I could go over the distance when really fresh."

John Murray won the three-mile event, beating out the former flying milkman, Dave Stephens, in a close finish. The time was a slow 13:40.

Mervyn Lincoln, Elliott's chief Australian mile rival, made a disappointing effort in the three-mile and finished 80 yards behind the winner.

Lincoln said he had been badly off form during the week and that he knew after the first lap he wasn't fit for the race.

Wildlife To Be Protected During Snow

BATON ROUGE, AP.—The state Saturday moved manpower and tools to Louisiana's north-eastern deer country to protect wildlife.

E. R. McDonald, Newellton, chairman of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, said the state intends to protect its wildlife during the heaviest snowfall in a decade.

McDonald said ten to 12 inches of snow was expected to fall on the northeast Louisiana deer, bear and turkey country.

"In addition to transferring game agents and biologists," McDonald said, "we are going to use planes, jeeps and boats to see that our wildlife is protected against weather as well as illegal hunters."

"And," he said, "we're going to see that violators suffer the heaviest penalties we can find on our law books."

Baellangeon Risks Title At B&B Monday

Adrian Baellangeon, the muscular Canadian who has taken the Louisiana wrestling scene by storm in a few short weeks, defends his newly-acquired state heavyweight title against badman "Demon" Jack O'Brien in the feature bout at the B&B Arena Monday night.

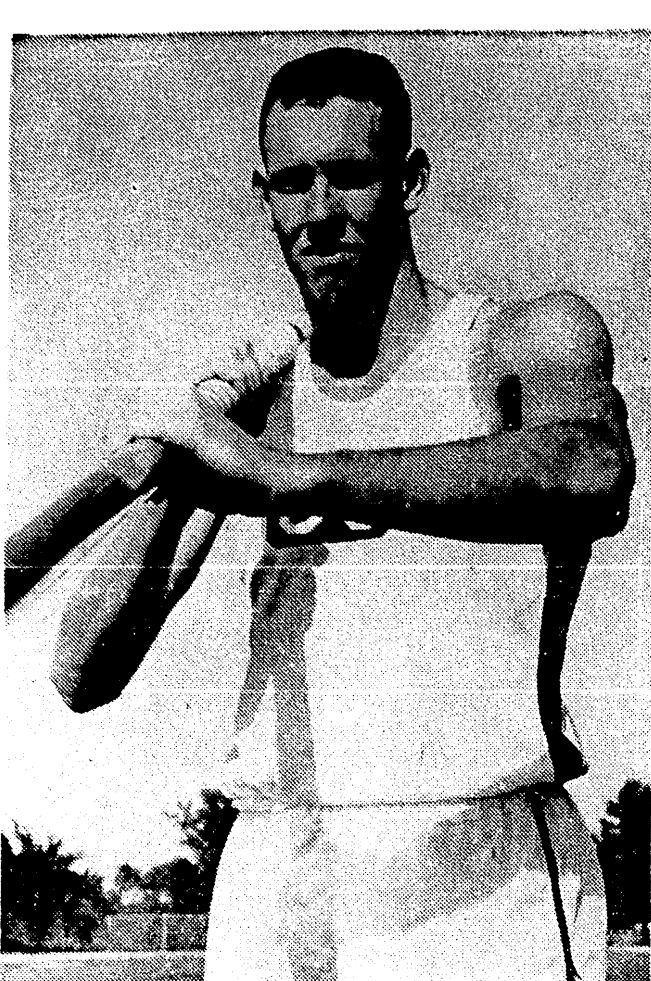

Standing 6-4 and scaling in at 248 pounds, the towering import from Canada has been a steady winner since he first appeared here a couple of months ago. Baellangeon lifted the championship from Firpo Zyzysko in a Lafayette match last week after beating the bald Pole repeatedly in non-title tag matches.

O'Brien has wrestled here only twice but was impressive both times. He's a rugged competitor from Death Valley, Calif.

The main event is billed over a one-hour time limit with two falls to win.

Chris Belkas, one-time title holder who has frequently teamed with Baellangeon in tag scramble, goes his separate way in the semifinal, taking on Prince Nero of Italy. The Prince wrestled here last week for the first time in several months.

Tony Jimenez of Sonora, Mexico, will meet Zyzysko in the card's first match, a one-fall, 20-minute affair.

J. D. MARTIN, Oklahoma pole vaulter, will compete in this year's Southwestern Relays at Lafayette, where he won his event last season with a vault of 14 feet and three-fourths inches. Martin, who went higher than any U.S. college sophomore in history last year, 15 feet and three-fourths inches, will have plenty of competition at SLI from world record holder Don Bragg.

Continental Show Shifts To Houston

HOUSTON (AP)—The Continental League's road show moves into Houston next week for a two-day session apparently aimed at smoothing over baseball franchise problems here.

President Branch Rickey will lead a delegation of 12 representatives of the new league's eight clubs. The league plans meetings in each of the member cities prior to opening play in 1961.

Earlier sessions were held in New York, Minneapolis and Dallas. Toronto, Buffalo, Atlanta and Denver remain on the itinerary.

Houston franchise owners, rebuffed in their bid to buy baseball territorial rights here in purchase of the American Assn. Houston Bulls, open talks Monday which could lead to merger of the two groups of owners.

But the Bulls and the Houston Spots Assn., local Continental league stadium here and Rickey operators, appear to be poles apart. The Bulls turned down a bid of $184,000 by the Continental group each of the member cities prior to opening play in 1961.

Rickey's arrival is not scheduled until Thursday, three days after the merger talks get underway.

Clear territorial rights, however, would answer only half the Houston problem. Plans are not yet firm for a suitable major league stadium here and Rickey has hinted he will take his circuit elsewhere unless they are quick in crystallizing.

Sooners Entered In S'West Meet

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special)—The University of Oklahoma, unofficial team champions in the 1959 Southwestern Relays according to total points kept by the press, will return to Lafayette as one of the highlights of what promises to be the greatest of the 31 Relays held so far.

The Southwestern Relays, already hailed by many as the oldest and largest Relay Carnival in the South, will again present the finest in track and field events for three days in which high schools, junior colleges, and universities will vie for honors in their respective classes.

Oklahoma will depend to a great extent on new talent this season. The Sooners will be strong in the distance events, with seniors Ernest Kleynhans, put and discus. Last season, as a sophomore, Lindsay heaved the shot 36' 4" to win the Big 8 in-state and Lee Smith bolstering the distance forces.

Dee Givens, a senior sprinter, holds times of 9.4 in the century, 20.4 in the 220 and 23.1 in the 250. Last year, Givens Oklahoma school record with a 100-yard dash of 17.5 seconds. He won the discus event at the Houston Meet of 32nd Annual Southwestern Relays.

Sophomores Dick Dorsey, Mark Sullivan and Richard Sinclair will give the Sooners a fine quartet of speed merchants.

The Sooners will count on the pole vault for quite a few points since Sooner coach Bill Carroll has J. D. Martin, the ten ranked pole vaulter in the world, and Larry Neeley, a senior returning. Martin vaulted 15 feet 3 3/4 inch last season, the highest any sophomore in college has ever made. He won the Southwestern Relays event with a jump of 14' 1 1/2". However, this year Martin will have to improve that mark since one of his competitors in the open pole vault event will be Don Bragg, the world's indoor record holder at 15' 9 3/4".

In the weights, Mike Lindsay, a junior from London, England, will be performing in the shot, put and discus. Last season, as a sophomore, Lindsay heaved the shot 36' 4" to win the Big 8 in-state and Lee Smith bolstering the distance forces.

Dee Givens, a senior sprinter, holds times of 9.4 in the century, 20.4 in the 220 and 23.1 in the 250. Last year, Givens Oklahoma school record with a 100-yard dash of 17.5 seconds. He won the discus event at the Houston Meet of 32nd Annual Southwestern Relays.

Sophomores Dick Dorsey, Mark Sullivan and Richard Sinclair will give the Sooners a fine quartet of speed merchants.

Berths Open In Recreation Jr. Cage Tourney

More entries are needed in the annual Junior Basketball Tournament sponsored by the Monroe Recreation Department, Assistant Director Jackie Neal said yesterday.

Neal said only four teams have entered the tourney, open to boys 13 and under who are participating in the recreation junior leagues.

The meet will be held Friday and Saturday in the Lee Junior High gym.

Teams interested in entering the tournament are urged to contact Neal at the Community Center, 113 Catalpa, telephone F-2170. Wednesday, Feb. 17, is the deadline for entering.

Gail Hodgson had the second best time in the nation for the mile last year among college runners when he hit his all-time high of 4:02.4 in winning the Houston Meet of Champions. Gail placed fourth in the mile at the NCAA Meet and also had the fifth best time in the two mile run with a 9:59.6. He made the All-American track team as a sophomore.

The Sooners promise to bring a potent team to the Relays, to be held April 7, 8, and 9. And with the bright array of stars who will appear in the meet, the 32nd Annual Southwestern Relays should be the greatest ever.

By, for, and about WOMEN

Monroe Morning World
February, 14

St. Valentine was a Bishop and martyr of the Church during the reign of the Roman Emperor Claudius II in the 3rd century A.D. The custom of choosing valentines on his feast day, February 14, is of considerable antiquity. On the eve of St. Valentine's day, young people met and drew lots from a number of names of the opposite sex, which were put into a common receptacle. Each gentleman thus got a lady for his valentine and became the valentine of a lady. Many other peculiar observances used to be commonly connected with St. Valentine's Eve and Day, to which allusion is frequently made by English writers. The day is not celebrated in the same manner now, but the same spirit prevails when we send cards, flowers, candy or other tokens to our loved ones on this day.

The younger set was entertained last Saturday night at Bayou DeSiard Country Club at a Valentine Dance by Miss Sandy Ussery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Ussery, 1913 Park Ave., and Mark Glazer, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Glazer, 2201 Ann St. Left to right are: Clifford Worley, the hostess, Miss Mary Till Wright and the host.

At the Valentine Dance last night at Neville High School given by the Student Council the above girls were in the court, each one a candidate sponsored by an organization on the campus. The student body voted for its choice for queen from this group of candidates and the final result kept secret until the dance; consequently, as this went to press the queen selected had not been divulged. From left to right seated are: Sharon Mann, Darla Starns, Sandra Stancil, and Sheila Irvin. Standing are Nancy Snellings and Joan Williams. Miss Billie Sue Dixon, also a candidate, is not shown.

Supervising the cutting out of Valentines for little friends is Mrs. Jack Terzia, 2220 Pargoud Blvd. Having a wonderful time with the scissors are her daughters Margaret, Amye and Martha.

Below: Linda Brice, Lynn Stringer, Ralph Fryday and Mickey Shaughnessy are enjoying the dance music of the Kats at the party given at the Highland Park Country Club last week-end. It was the annual Teen-Age Dance, a regular function of the Club.

Mrs. S. I. Courtman receives a Valentine box of chocolates from her three sons, Harry, Ned and Jeff. They are shown in their lovely home at 1401 Milton Street.

Nuptial Vows Pledged By (Miss Humble, K. L. Fletcher

The Chapel of the First Baptist Church in West Monroe was the setting on January 31 at 2:30 p.m. for the wedding of Miss Marjorie Carolyn Humble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Humble of West Monroe and Kay Larry Fletcher of LeCompte, son of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Lee Fletcher of Watson.

Dr. N. W. Carpenter Jr. performed the double ring ceremony before the altar decorated with southern smilax and baskets of white gladioli. Mr. Robert Olden, organist, played the nuptial music and accompanied the soloist, Jack Day, who rendered the selections "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, on her father's arm as she walked down the aisle, was wearing a two-piece suit of tulle and tulle. Her hair was styled in a bun and she wore a crown of white gladioli and greenery.

Miss Riser Comments On Her Junior Year Abroad

Miss Martha Riser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Riser, 1408 Forsythe Ave., is studying this year at the University of London, England, on the junior year abroad program of Newcomb College in New Orleans. She is living in the dormitory with English girls and learning first hand how foreign students live. Her comments on her school and travel so far this year will be of interest to her many friends. The following are excerpts from her letters.

We traveled through beautiful country just at harvest time. We went along the narrow, winding roads and saw the men in the fields working, the haystacks beginning to dot the green fields, the cross of the grey stone walls separating each field from the next, and the indescribable pattern of rich colors all around. In the small towns there were flowers, flowers, flowers. That was the most striking thing everywhere to me. We visited a number of old churches, cathedrals, abbeys, monasteries, all of different types of architecture, all ages and all with stories of their own. It is an odd feeling to stand in a cathedral or abbey that was built 500 years before Columbus discovered America, and that has been used through all the years of history since that time. Then we saw several country estates, homes and ancient feudal castles that have always seemed like pure fiction to me — Warwick Castle, Kenilworth Castle and Windsor near London. Of course we visited Shakespeare's Stratford-on-Avon and saw the production of "Othello" there. Two days we spent in Oxford seeing the University buildings.

London isn't nearly as beautiful as the country but there are so many interesting things to see and do here, it seems there is no end to the excitement and newness of everything. After seeing Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, the Tower of London with the crown jewels, the changing of the guards at Buckingham Palace and the rest of the usual tourist attractions we can now settle down to enjoying the plays, concerts, ballets and such, of which there are more than I could ever see in a lifetime.

Wednesday afternoons nobody in the University has any classes, so that everyone can take part in sports. But it is also convenient for matinees, shopping, visiting museums, etc.

On Charing Cross Road, the bookshop street, we went to Foyles the largest book store in London. It is immense. On its many floors I saw books on everything from Homer and Plato in Greek to used paperback westerns, and to a volume entitled "The Dissection of the Cockroach."

There was the excitement of being here for the British elections and seeing everyone take part, speak his opinion and discuss politics and nothing else for 4 or 5 weeks before the election. Even the students who can't vote yet stayed up all night to get the returns on T. V. and radio or on the big lighted board in Trafalgar Square.

I sold poppies for the British Legion for Armistice Day, and I happened to turn in my money when the Lord Mayor of London was visiting that station. I met him and his wife and had tea with them. He was dressed in full regalia.

In Madrid, Dec. 20 — In Spain lunch is from 1 to 4 (lunch plus siesta) and dinner from 9 to 12. Our hotel, owned by an American and his wife is centrally located, offers room, bath, phone and all meals for $2.00 a day.

Riding to the hotel on arrival we saw everywhere on the streets and buildings, flags, flags, flags, American flags. You can imagine the thrill when the driver explained proudly, "Ei-en-kower come in 2 days." We had missed him in Paris, and in our rush we didn't realize that he would be in Madrid at the same time as we. It's so exciting to see the city getting ready for him. There are American flags, literally everywhere, pictures of Ike, posters on buildings and stores announcing his arrival and invariably when we are recognized as Americans we are informed that Eisenhower will be here "Lunes." We are told people are coming from all over Spain to see him; the hotels are full and the city has been at a high pitch of excitement for the last 4 or 5 days. The Spanish pronounce Ike, "EEE-Kay," separating it into 2 syllables.

All day long today more and more policemen have been appearing in the streets. Public address loudspeakers are attached to the lampposts on the route and marching music has been played all day, creating an air of excitement. The day has been declared a holiday from 1 p.m. on and the whole town has closed up.

The mob in front of us kept pushing out into the street and the policemen had trouble pushing it back. Finally, 45 minutes late, the parade started.

We actually got to see Ike better than we dreamed we would. Luck was with us, we stood on a step in front of a building, a head above the mob on the sidewalk and street. He passed right by us, sitting beside Franco in an open car, in his dark brown suit and Homburg, which he took off and waved as he passed by us. He had that famous wide smile and the enormous crowd, which had remained rather calm for the press truck, bands, mounted troops and official cars preceding him, exploded in one big cheer and waving of white handkerchiefs as his car went past. It was a magnificent sight and such a moving one for us that we all most cried. It is fantastic that so many people would go to so much trouble to see one man and try so hard to make him welcome for an 18 hour stay — And isn't it wonderful that that man should be the president of our country?

The Plaza Mayor was just "up the steps" from our hotel. It is a sort of market place open even on Sunday with a maze of booths, stalls and even a bumper car ride for children. On Sunday morning there is a Stamp Exchange quite famous among collectors, where stamps are traded or bought, and supposedly one can find fabulous bargains. From what I saw there weren't any bargains to be had that day.

All the tobacco sales are run by the government and postage stamps are sold in any tobacco shop (which is fine when you need a stamp on Sunday). The little box-like stalls are located at intervals all along the main sidewalks. The cigarettes all seem to be American brands here, while in France and England they have their own brands and it's difficult to find an American cigarette.

The Prado is considered the greatest art museum in the world, and understandably so. There are more great works there than any one place in the world, I understand. We saw the works of Goya, El Greco, Rubens, Velasquez, Murillo and ever so many others.

Yesterday we saw Pompeii and climbed Mt. Vesuvius, even went inside the crater and felt the steam coming through the cracks hot enough to light a cigarette.

The great value of our visit to Italy was our exposure to their overwhelming cultural heritage. I loved Rome the best. It was a never-to-be-forgotten experience to stand in the Coliseum, to walk through the ancient Roman Forum, to see the Aqueduct, and ride on the original stones of the Appian Way, all of which we learned about in our Latin class at Neville.

I feel I got more from that one month of travel (in southern Europe at Christmas time) than from any one year of school. The whole time we were learning about places and people first hand. Especially interesting were our rides in 2nd class Spanish and Italian train compartments with 7 natives. We met every kind of person imaginable. Many times when we couldn't sit together, I would be the only person in the compartment who spoke English. Yet we would always manage in some way to communicate and laugh or sing together. I always got off knowing a few new words of Spanish, French or Italian and the feeling that I understood them better because of that experience.

Girl Scout News

The heart of Girl Scouting is the troop, a group of girls of about the same age and interest, who with their leaders and troop committee members, plan and carry out activities within the framework of the organization. It is doubtful that in any one week an observer would find two troops engaged in just the same projects. Yet, there would be fundamentals common to all — the Promise and Laws, the uniform, adult leadership, democratic government, patrol system, worthwhile activities. Therein lies the strength and appeal of Scouting.

For Intermediate Scouts, Ranks and badges give a girl a needed feeling of accomplishment, give her a chance for experiences she wouldn't have otherwise. Many a leader, too, finds her life enriched by trying something new along with the girls. The badges, aptly called "Proficiency" badges are awarded when the girl, in the leader's opinion, have done the prescribed activities often enough and well enough to give service. They are all tied to the motto of Scouting: "Be Prepared."

All this is by way of explaining some of our accounts of badge activity. Interior Decoration, closed by Troop 32, has provided fun and worthwhile program for several weeks, according to the troop leader, Mrs. J. E. Wood. Highlight of their work was a trip to a local furniture store where an experienced decorator helped the girls to learn the difference in styles of furniture, showed them drapery patterns and answered the questions they had saved up. Other activities on the badge include actually making a hand decorated article, refinishing a piece of furniture, making a flower arrangement. The following girls are registered in Troop 32: Jane Brant, Marie Christian, Denise Duncan, Gayle Nolan, Kathy Shaver, Donna Spargo, Sue Spight, Carol Ann Sugar, Frankie Springer, Diane Tomlinson, Karen Walker, Irma White, Dottie Whitfield, Sherry Wood, Benita Williams. The girls are also carrying out requirements of World Trefoil badge, particularly appropriate during February, International month. They've had fun with Backyard Camper, which they had to lay aside during the bad weather.

Anna Lea DuBos, an enthusiastic member of Troop 44 for three years, who moved to Lafayette last summer, has been elected president of the troop she joined there and is happily continuing her Scout work, we hear from her mother. One of the nicest things about Scouting is that its three and a half million members are found almost everywhere, so that there is usually a troop with room for a newcomer. Speaking of former Scouts, many of you remember the Charles Casons, a Scout family with four daughters, who moved to New Orleans. We hear that Suzanne, the oldest daughter, is in a troop that is definitely planning to go to Our Cabana, in Mexico, next summer. Dreams do have a way of becoming a reality for Scouts.

Meetings of Northside and College Neighborhoods will be held Wednesday. Plans for observance of Girl Scout Week will be completed. Every troop should be represented in order to know what part it will have. Northside meets at St. Paul's at 9:30; College at Memorial Methodist at 1:15. Every registered adult is a member of a neighborhood association.

On Dit'

by Denise

It's Valentine's Day, and Denise hopes that each and every reader has heard from his or her secret heart. As holiday lagniappe, we will have two poems today: one serious, one light-hearted, both about Love, Love, Love. First, a sonnet by Ednast, Vincent Millay:

Love is not all, it is not meat
Nor drink
Nor slumber nor a roof against the rain;
Nor yet a floating spar to men that sink
And rise and sink and rise and sink again;
Love cannot fill the thickened lung with breath,
Nor clean the blood, nor set the fractured bone;
Yet many a man is making friends with death,
Even as I speak, for lack of love alone.
It will be that in a difficult hour,
Flung down by pain and moaning for release,
Or nagged by want past resolution's power,
I might be driven to sell your love for peace.
Or trade the memory of this night for food,
It will be that I do not think I would.

The Valentine theme, which lends itself to any decorations, has been seen in the flowers at the week's parties. Wednesday afternoon ANN HOLMES and JOYCE KILLOGG honored new-

HUNTS and the ALEX HUNTS of Ruston. The STEWART HUNTS plan to go down today... The STAN BAGWELLS and the ED STAMOURS, JR., left on Thursday for a trip to south Louisiana. They went to Lafayette, where they spent Thursday night, and on to New Orleans on Friday. They are due home today.

Also in New Orleans this weekend were the GEORGE SNELLINGS, JR., the H. G. McDONALDS, and the HENRY BERNSTEINS. R. They attended the Athenians Ball last night.

Cleverest decorations see in Monroe in some time were those at the Junior Charity League's style show in the Paragon ballroom last Saturday night. In line with the general theme of the clothes shown, a cruise ship was built on stage. Models entered on a gangplank past travelers standing at the deck rail. The audience was seated at tables for eight and ten. Travel power hearts, Red and white car-folders and menus from cruise ships, supplied by the Stuckey Travel agency, were used on the tables. Large posters on the wall advertised gay foreign climes.

MARTHA DREW DAWKINS celebrated her ninth birthday at a skating party Saturday. Winning the Stop-the-Music game, JUDY BRANT and JAYJAY DIXON were awarded boxes of Valentine candy. Doughnuts and soft drinks were served to about forty children. Favors were miniature red hearts filled with candy.

The junior high set favors the small home dance as its favorite entertainment. RUSSELL MCUE entertained ten friends at this type of party on Friday night. Pink roses and pink candles were used on the refreshment table, where finger sandwiches, cookies, and punch were served throughout the evening.

On Friday afternoon BETSY SUE KING and MARTY SUGAR entertained with a party at the Bayou DeSiard country club. The occasion marked Betsy's third birthday and Marty's second. Betsy wore her Valentine dress; red skirt and white blouse embroidered with red hearts. A white tree hung with red hearts was the central decor. Red hearts were used the length of the table, which held two birthday cakes. Betsy's centered with a red doll. Marty's with a football. Red balloons and lollipops were given as favors, and a mariometric show was the entertainment for the afternoon.

JAMES MURPHY was host at a skating party on his seventh birthday Saturday afternoon. About forty first graders attended, with CHARLES SALISBURY and AMY WHITE winning the Stop-the-Music game. Favors were jacks for the girls and blow-out parachutes for the boys. Doughnuts and soft drinks were served.

And here is a gay little Valentine lyric by Sara Teasdale: Strephon kissed me in the spring, Robin in the fall. But Colin only looked at me, And never kissed at all. Strephon's kiss was lost in jest, Robin's lost in play. But the kiss in Colin's eyes, Haunts me night and day.

Afternoon Rites Unite Miss Tillman, C. Hansford

On Sunday, January 31st at 3 p.m. at the New Light Baptist Church, Miss Ann Tillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Tillman, became the bride of A-1c Charles Hansford, son of Mr. H. Hansford, West Monroe and Mrs. William Duchesne.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Houston of Sicily Island. Two six-branched tree-candelabra with white stock and greenery formed the setting. Nuptial music was rendered by Miss Armadine Miller, pianist, of Natchitoches, Louisiana.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a lovely gown of white lace and nylon chiffon, with a molded bodice with a square neckline. The full skirt was ballerina length.

She wore a fingertip veil of nylon tulle and carried a bouquet of white carnations on a white satin Bible with streamers of white satin. The bride's only jewelry was a drop pearl which was a gift of the groom.

The maid of honor, Miss Billie Ruth Eason, wore a ballerina length royal blue chiffon dress with head band. The flower girl was a niece of the bride, Miss Joyce Annette Young, and ring-bearer was a nephew of the bride, Master David Young.

Mr. Kenneth Tillman, brother of the bride, served the groom as best man. Usher was Mr. Frederick Tillman, brother of the bride.

The bride's mother chose a navy suit with matching accessories; the groom's mother chose a grey suit with matching accessories. Both wore white carnation corsages.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Pat Young. The bride's table was covered with an ecru lace cloth with white milk glass candlesticks holding pink candles at either side of the three-tiered wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom. At either end of the table were white milk glass punch bowls.

For their wedding trip to Biloxi, Mississippi, the bride chose a beige suit accented by tangerine accessories.

A-1c and Mrs. Hansford will make their home in Washington, D. C.

Relaxed And Eased Shapes This Spring

"Woman to Woman"
By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI) — Eased and relaxed shapes dot the spring dress collections.

But designers haven't completely dashed hopes of those leaning to the bosom-defending look. There's definitely a sprinkling of the well-fitted look amid the casual shapes.

Designers who haven't banished clothes hugging the anatomy tend to rely on midriffs — wide and wider — for accent.

The neckline story is simplicity. There's the bateau neckline — line stretching from shoulder to shoulder. There are low cardigans, scoop and wide open collar necklines.

Among dress collections being shown during the New York Couture group's National Press Week, which opened Sunday, sleeve and shoulder treatment is important.

Most shoulders slope with the figure. Sleeves are capped, bell-shaped, bat winged, modified dolman, kimono type.

Sleeveless dresses blend with jackets, tunics and coats of all lengths to state the case for the increasingly important costume look.

The topping for the costume dress — jacket — often has matching fabric lining in print or solid, brightly colored or subdued.

Pleats in dress skirts are box, knife and accordion. Some put hipiness into a disguise. Skirts also are flared in the front and full at sides.

Dressier fashions feature floating panels and draped skirt shapes, frequently in chiffon.

Dress fabrics seemingly are weightless. There are tissue-thin voiles, light wools, and silks — silks and more silks. There are silk linens, honans, tweeds, surah, crepes and blends.

Navy, beige, gray and misted shades figure where spring dresses are concerned. There are floral prints, geometric patterns and stripes.

The Maurice Rentner collection introduced a silhouette with a slightly dropped shoulder line and dome or cylindrical shaped sleeves.

Top interest in the Rentner dress line is achieved with canopy collars which seemingly mold the shoulderline. The Rentner sheath has a magic panel, starting at the bustline and scissoring out as it reaches the hemline.

Adele Simpson showed small-jacket costumes with a splatter of silk print — for contrast — in blouses or bodice. One of her jackets reverses to match the bodice.

The coat-dress is what she calls a costume — a dress for a dress mood, a coat for a coat mood. Costume shoulders are newly widened by capelets, fichus or widened sleeves. Most are done in silks. A few are done in wools.

SONG-WRITING PAYS

NEW YORK (AP) — In beginning her career as one of Broadway's most successful playwrights, Lillian Hellman started by writing a few poems which were published. The poems, now and then, became lyrics for songs.

Now in her new Broadway play, "Toys in the Attic," she has Jason Robards Jr. playing the leading role. At one point he pauses to strum a banjo and sing a Creole folk song which fits the mood of the play, a story about New Orleans. Miss Hellman wrote the lyrics for the song. It's title is "Big Day."

Childbearing Superstitions In Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Some expectant mothers in Hawaii still hold to superstitions on childbearing that were brought to the islands by their forbears three generations ago, the state department of health says.

For example, mothers-to-be often say "No thanks" when the squid — an oriental delicacy — is passed around.

They like squid, but a Chinese and Filipino belief that it may result in difficult delivery or an abnormal child says they shouldn't eat it.

Such strange superstitions showed up among mothers of Chinese, Japanese, Filipino and Polynesian ancestry.

Common to all four races is a belief that pregnant women should not loaf around or rest too much. If they do, their child will be lazy and fat.

A Filipino belief restricts the new mother's housework, travel and dancing for three months. She can't read or have a bedroom light immediately after delivery, to prevent blindness.

To some Japanese, the sex of the baby determines when the mother returns to her housework. If it's a boy, the time is 30 days. She waits 33 days if it's a girl.

The expectant Filipino mother may have many things to remember to keep evil spirits away and produce a healthy child.

She should avoid funerals and graveyards. It is ill-advised for her to go out at night.

She should satisfy her food cravings. Otherwise, her child may be birthmarked.

She and the father must not criticize deformed people. This could lead to a crippled baby.

If she doesn't want a fussy baby, the Filipino avoids eating green weeping papaya.

She doesn't blow on fire or sit on a coconut. They might cause the child to have a cleft lip and palate. So might eating "cracked" foods, such as fruit with broken skin or egg from a shell with a crack in it.

Fire also enters Japanese beliefs. Looking at fire may cause a red birthmark.

A black birthmark may be the result of the mother's attending a funeral.

Some Chinese feel that a stillbirth, premature birth, deceptive baby and birthmarks all are considered punishment for a mother's wrong-doing.

A Japanese mother may feel shame if she bears twins. Some Japanese consider multiple births shameful because that is "like animals," according to the survey.

Chinese care of infants can range from the exotic to the dramatic. Still extant is a custom of bathing the baby's eyes in honey-suckle water.

TO BECOME THE BRIDE OF DELBERT WILLIAM MILLER, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Miller of this city is Miss Merrill Flacy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Flacy also of this city. The wedding is planned for Friday, March 4, at 10 a.m. at the Trinity Lutheran Church.

Rome's Love Lottery Held St. Valentine's Day

On Valentine's Day, here are some heart facts that may help you brush up on your love lore. For example, do you know how flour and flowers fit into romance? Why a maiden winks? The origin of the term "tying the knot"? or how this whole Valentine's Day business started in the first place?

St. Valentine was a Christian martyr on whose day the annual love lottery was held in Rome. At this time every year young men drew the names of their sweethearts. The romantic Romans found they could lessen the risk in picking their prospective mates by sending advance messages — i.e., valentines — to the right girl first.

The heart — best known of all Valentine's symbols — comes from the circle which is the Egyptian symbol for eternity. Two hearts or rings entwined mean love united and a bride's ring goes on her third finger, left hand, to establish contact with the "love vein" which is believed to run directly to the heart.

Tying the knot is an old Spanish custom in which the bridegroom's sash was tied around the newlyweds during the ceremony. The knot also symbolizes the uniting to two loose ends and there was a time when a well-dressed maiden always tied the laces of her bodice in a knot over her heart.

Philo (Greek word for love) and Dendron (tree) make the philodendron leaf one of the romantic symbols most often used in watch bracelets and other jewelry designs.

There's also a sad legend involving the ivy. After it lost its sweetheart, the ivy vowed to twine only around the homes of happy couples forever after.

Cupid is said to represent the chaos of the emotions of a person in love. His arrows carry romantic messages. Birds are also the messengers of love — hence the expression "a little bird told me."

The key to a maiden's heart was originally the key to her lover's grain bin, given to show that he bestowed upon her all his worldly goods. A lady's wink comes from the female firefly's blink with which she attracts her mate. Flour, which means the best part of the grain, later became simply "flower," meaning "the best." That's why flowers are always right for your best girl. Wheat, from which flour comes, is also the traditional symbol of harvest and prosperity and there was a time when the traditional bridal bouquet was a sheaf of wheat.

In fact, flour is still as important as flowers in the modern marriage ceremony — in the wedding cake, of course.

It was voted to submit Mrs. Marguerite Meek's name to run as second vice president of the State Federation. Announcement of the district meeting to be held March 6th at Minden, Louisiana was made.

Those present were: Mrs. Lela Breaud, Mrs. Elizabeth Burdoux, Mrs. Vera Edwards, Mrs. Nelyn Hollywood, Mrs. Carmel Jones, Mrs. Agnes Krogmire, Mrs. Mary Gene Lea, Mrs. Helen Luckett, Mrs. Neal Adams, J. J. Barnes, Mrs. McElroy, Mrs. Gladys Miles, H. R. Carpenter, J. R. Cole, Mrs. Meek, Mrs. Mae Modes, James H. Hall, F. A. Jones, E. O'Kelly, Mrs. Bessie Skinner, Mrs. E. M. Stephan, Miss Alice McBride, Miss Delores Pitman and Miss Harriet Smith. Any Sigma Kappas in the Monroe area are asked to contact either Mrs. G. L. Herrell, FA 2-3779 or the Providence president, Mrs. James H. Hall, FA 2-5122.

You Can Eat Sensibly And Lose Weight

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you are a cello player, you burn up about 91 calories every hour, that you play, depending on your weight. But how many of us play the cello or the piccolo, for that matter?

Most people get tired of occupations that keep them busy, so they don't stick long enough to use up many calories.

A housewife for instance can use up calories bending, twisting, dusting and doing the daily chores. She can use up 42 calories an hour peeling potatoes, but who peels potatoes by the hour?

Like boxing? You can drop 798 calories doing a few rounds with your husband, providing you stick to it for an hour.

Or during the same length of time, the expenditure of calories in bicycling is 175 to 532; skating — 245; walking — 238 to 581. You can ride a trotting horse and use up 201 calories.

CALORIE COUNTING

The act of eating uses up 23 calories. Eat low calorie vegetables and you're home free. Vegetables that supply fewer than 25 calories, for instance, can leave you on the minus side. These include two-thirds cup of string beans, asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, cucumber, endive, escarole, kale, lettuce, mustard greens, parsley, pepper, radishes, spinach, summer squash, tomatoes, sauerkraut.

A well-balanced reducing diet should have proper nutrients so that "weight may be lost without flabbiness of tissue or looseness of skin and a feeling of hunger between meals," say two nutrition authorities, Prof. Katherine H. Fisher and Raymond W. Swift in discussing "Calories and Body Weight" in a recent publication. This one provides almost 1,500 calories.

Breakfast: One-half cup of orange juice, 1 cooked egg, 1 slice of bread, 1 teaspoon of butter, 1 cup of skim milk.

Noon: A 4-ounce broiled beef patty; two thirds cup of green beans with 1 teaspoon of butter, 1 medium apple, 1 cup of skim milk.

Dinner: A 4-ounce serving of broiled halibut, two-thirds cup of cooked carrots with 1 teaspoon of butter, one-half slice of bread, 1 teaspoon of butter, 2 medium peach halves with 2 tablespoons of syrup, 1 cup of milk.

Coffee and tea may be used in this diet, but alcoholic and sweetened beverages should be avoided because they contribute calories to the food intake. Other vegetables that supply fewer than 25 calories may be substituted.

PLANNED REDUCING

These nutrition experts suggest that a 1,200-1,600 calorie diet with a slower loss of weight is better than a 1,000 calorie diet which lacks food essentials. The notion that any particular food is especially deadly in causing overweight is without foundation. Any dietary fat is more than twice as "deadly" as a carbohydrate, says Prof. Swift.

Overweight occurs, they say, when a person takes in day after day more energy than his body needs. All the energy represented by body nutrients must ultimately appear as heat, body tissue or work. Our bodies do not use heat as their source of energy he says.

It takes a deficit of 3,500 calories to lose one pound of body so a daily reduction of a mere 500 calories in the actual energy intake will result in the loss of one pound of body weight each week.

You cannot lose weight by exercise alone, these experts point out, explaining: "It is unrealistic to suggest that a man who is overweight can lose weight by exercise alone because it would take work equal to about 35,000 calories to remove this excess tissue."

On the other hand, they suggest, "It would have been possible for him to have prevented the accumulation of 10 pounds of weight by a small amount of exercise each day."

Comic Valentines Top Fad

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

IS IT TRUE that our budding heroines have been brainwashed by modern swains?

Why else would the younger generation prefer comic Valentines to sentimental style?

Time was when a young girl would cringe at the sight of a sarcastic Valentine, but times have changed. Humorous cards have become so popular with the younger set that a young girl, unlike her ma and grandma, would probably get hysterical at the sight of a strictly sentimental card, even in Leap Year.

Fun-poking cards are on the scene again this year in goodly numbers, modern versions of popular cards of a half-century or more ago. But there also will be more sentimental cards available this year.

Card designers are hoping for the best, buoyed on by Leap Year. They have dipped into their palettes and props for hearts of frosted gold, padded satin and simulated lace, hoping to stem the tide. At a recent display of antique and modern Valentine cards it was difficult to tell the difference between the old Dan Cupid and the new, and designers hope his aim is true.

Girls in bygone days had their ways of getting even, and a typical Valentine sent to a wolf exhibited a gay blade twirling his mustache with the captain "Lady Killer." The wording was bitter.

And to an old maid of that era went this insulting message that undoubtedly brought chagrin, shock and tears:

"Ods Bobs, I'll never wed with you
And leave my rosy smiling Sue.

With all they pelf, thou shalt be mine,
Thou ugly, wrinkled Valentine."

But in 1960 a girl will laugh hilariously, no doubt, at getting one of the traditional squelchers which this year might go like this:

"Sweetheart, you're one in a million, and if I ever lose interest in the other 999,999 I'll let you know."

The difference is that she's getting used to the casual attitude of the modern romancer.

Metal To Thud Not Clink When Dropped

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—Look for the science of thudology to quiet some clatter on the homefront.

So promises Jerome E. Ruzicka, a thudologist from Watertown, Mass., who is engaged in tooling metals so that they thud instead of clink when dropped or banged.

The tranquilized metals right now are being used in the making of products for industry and the military.

But their use in missiles, aircraft and such eventually will feed back to the homefront, the engineer said during an interview.

The technique perfected by Ruzicka quiets metals by making two sheets function something like bread in a sandwich. The filler, a secret elastic brew, bonds the sheets. You can't pull them apart.

The principle is demonstrated by dropping a half-dollar on the kitchen sink. It clinks and rings, but drop a half-dollar piece of the tranquilized metal on the same sink and you have to strain to hear — a thud.

The bonding material, according to Ruzicka, intercepts the sound waves upon impact, turning the energy of noise into slight heat. The noise is silenced.

The engineer said pots and pans made of this material wouldn't set up a clatter when accidentally dropped or banged.

Spoons, knives and forks of the sandwiched metal wouldn't ring out when dropped on the porcelain surface of a sink. There wouldn't be a clatter on the platter either when the eating utensils are used around the family table.

The tranquilized metals—aluminum, steel or silver—also can silence air conditioners and blot out much of the noise from air-blowing heating units, said the engineer.

Some of the metal noises about the house you may want to keep of course. Say — the clinking of aluminum tumblers when toasting. But even that can be silenced if it bothers you, according to Ruzicka.

"I'm even bothered by the noise a waste basket makes when dropping a half-dollar on the kitchen sink. It clinks and rings, especially since I know the noise can be silenced."

Fashions Used As Therapy For Patients

By ALAN CLINE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A team of attractive San Francisco women, almost totally ignorant of the principles of psychiatry, are using a new weapon in the fight against mental illness — the therapy of fashion.

Fashion Group Inc., an association of women in executive positions in the fashion industry, works on the theory that every woman, even a withdrawn, silent schizophrenic, has an inborn desire to be beautiful.

Led by Mrs. Jane Winthrop, regional director of the group, the women planned a fashion show at Napa State Hospital, about 50 miles northeast of here.

Mrs. Winthrop, a pin-size ball of fire, said her people did not know how they would be received so they started off with a bang, a gorgeous model, sweeping on stage wearing a strikingly beautiful and tame evening gown of Grecian cut.

The women inmates perked up and looked.

After the first show, each patient who wanted it was given a personal fashion counseling by a top San Francisco seamstress. Each was shown her good points, the tricks of fashion best suited to her and the kind of clothes that complimented her.

Fabrics were donated by local merchants so the patients could make their own clothes.

Later the patients were shown hair styling and cosmetics, foundation, hairpins, posture and how to walk.

Dr. Theo Miller, hospital superintendent, said he feels this fashion therapy will focus into something of national scope in mental hospitals.

"It is therapy," Dr. Miller remarked. "There is no question in my mind about it. And it is excellent therapy."

Mrs. Winthrop explained her people adopted this selling point for the patients.

"You are a woman, and you must look pretty."

The patients already have held one fashion show of their own.

And, says Mrs. Winthrop, they did look pretty.

MRS. FLOYD T. O'NEAL OF EL DORADO, was the former Julia M. Chappell of Monroe. The wedding was a double ring ceremony performed last evening at 7 by Dr. Jany Weber. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Chappell of Monroe and the groom a son of Mrs. Grover Tullos and the late Mr. O'Neal of Olla.

College Women In America Realistic

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP)—Anybody who's worried about the future fate of the nation should take a few days off to get acquainted with America's college girls.

I don't mean just the prom-trotting belles of the Ivy League circuit. I mean the just as glamorous but more down-to-earth young women of the Midwest and the South, who often have to work their way through college. Not only are there more of them, but they also represent what makes America the most fun I've had since my own college days was this week.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Where accessories are concerned spring fashion news is in the bag.

Front-runner is the satchel — white with strong colors, black patents and shiny straps. There's a continuation of novelty in fabrics — prints, tapestries, upholstery. Leathers are textured.

Mrs. Tolbird Speaks To Woodlawn HDC

Woodlawn Home Demonstration Club met in the home of Mrs. Keith Cobb for the February 5th meeting with Mrs. Willie Smith serving as co-hostess to the 21 members and three guests present.

"Always put your name and return address on your envelope even though it is only a Christmas card," stated Mrs. J. C. Tolbird Jr., as she brought the demonstration, "Business Facts for Busy Homemakers" and was assisted by Mrs. E. W. Black, both members of the Lakeview Home Demonstration Club.

Nutrition leader, Mrs. G. E. Rutledge, recommended the economical way to have plenty of milk is to use powdered milk, and for the nerves she stressed the importance of eating pork which contains thiamin. Mrs. Truman W. left, president, presided at the business session.

Enjoying the fellowship and refreshments were the guests, Mrs. Tolbird, Mrs. Black and Mrs. Jack Douglas and Misses: Wright, Leon Sims, Doyle Raborn, John Rush, H. M. Wallace, C. A. Hollingsworth, St. Rutledge, Maxwell Brown, Kenneth Bonnette, Tony Brown, Gerald Morehead, G. E. Rutledge, Erby Tisdale, Wallace Snowden, Harvie Eady, Ernie Frith, Breard Bonnette, and Courtney Caples.

Small Accents Important To Fashionable

A Japanese artist who is campaigning to simplify her country's kimono styles has whipped up an Oriental at-home outfit for American women. The set, designed by Miyoko Yanagita, consists of a white robe with wide, flowing sleeves and buttoned side-slits; tapered, calf-length pajama pants; and a narrow gown. The fabric is a new tissue tricot resembling satin.

wrist bone to four-button type. The fabrics are shiny, sleek satin, shantung, linen textured nylon, string, light weight sueded nylon. Colors are powered Navy, off-white, grey, cologne, chamois, putty.

—Shoes continue with the pointed toe. It points more than it did last spring. For evening and at home, sandals show new bareness. For walking, it's the relaxed open-toe look. Color emphasis afoot is bone, honey, cologne, and the newest of spring beiges to brown.

—Flowers fashionable for spring's parade are carnations and camellias worn as large boutonnieres.

—Scarves are used as lingerie trims with short jackets. Stoles of all fabrics and sizes ranging to cover-ups, are news.

—Belts are wide and wider.

—Jewelry fashion trends put necklaces higher, around the throat. More bracelets will be seen above the shortened gloves. Earrings are bigger. Pins are larger and bolder.

Highlights of collections shown by individual fashion firms Thursday included:

—Pauline Trigere showed elbow room jackets. They are small boleros with sleeves ending at the elbow. Sleeves for evening and daytime are huge. Some look like caps. She calls that type canopy.

—Mollie Parnis unveiled the swagger silhouette. Sleeves and shoulder area are ample. The waistline is eased.

—Oleg Cassini believes clothes should make a woman look like a woman and his collection does just that. He moulds evening and cocktail dresses to the figure. Necklines are daring. For daytime dresses and costumes, he leans to the school-girl look, showing white collars, cuffs and bows.

—Herbert Sondheim showed coats coordinated with dresses, and a jacketed overblouse look teamed with dresses.

—David E. Gottlieb showed a fitted, waist-length jacket sleeveless but with a raglan armhole. The dress underneath is slim and has bracelet length sleeves.

—Samuel Winston submits the coat dress. It is a coat and a dress, usually belted and with flared skirt. It was shown in silks and in sheer wools.

Delicate Is The Word For This Hobby

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Berntine Jones has a hobby that's about as delicate as walking on eggs.

She makes mosaic pictures out of egg shells.

Nothing to it, says Miss Jones — provided you've lots of time and patience.

Her third and most recent production, a woodland scene measuring 18 by 27 inches, took nearly two years to complete. It consists of 24,300 pieces of egg shell, give or take a few hundred.

Here's how she does it: Sketch a picture outline on cardboard or plywood. Clean all the egg membrane out of the shells and paint them with water colors in the shades desired. Break the shells into pieces and glue them in place, picking them up with a bit of airplane cement on an upholsterer's or corsage pin. Spray the finished picture with clear plastic to keep the shells from chipping.

"In time, you get so you can tell approximately what shape piece of shell you want and what shape will fit its neighbor," Miss Jones explains. "The best procedure is to mash the large shell, then chip the smaller pieces with a needle to fit."

JONATHAN KING

No One Wanted His Valentines

KANSAS CITY (UPI)—A 19th century Englishman who saved hearts by the thousands had his own broken when the world all but rejected the sentimental project to which he devoted his life.

From early manhood until his death at the age of 75 in 1912, Jonathan King collected greeting cards, especially heart-adorned valentines. He accumulated a bulging collection that eventually weighed 15 tons.

So great was his affection for valentines that he named the 14th of his 15 children, a boy, Valentine King, in honor of the day and the date, Feb. 14. He called the stationer store he operated in London the "Valentine Shop."

The largest concentration of King's collection of nearly one million greeting cards, of which 30,000 were valentines, is now housed here in the Hallmark historical collection.

The story of King's obsession has been pieced together by Carroll Altom Means, an estate appraiser and an antiquary of Woodbridge, Conn., who retrieved a portion of the Briton's life work from oblivion a decade ago and eventually transferred it to the Century Englishman who saved hearts by the thousands had his own broken when the world all but rejected the sentimental project to which he devoted his life.

"In 1911 King became worried about the future of his collection," Means said. "He realized that no ordinary collector would assume responsibility for 15 tons of material. He took his problem to the print room of the British Museum, offering to sell the collection. They had no money."

"He then offered the choicest parts of the collection to be selected by the Victorian and Albert Museum. This offer was declined. Later, the London Museum expressed interest in a part of King's collection and a transfer of a small number of items was made during his lifetime."

Jane Powell Says Could Be Siren

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jane Powell, a star since she was 14, is all woman now but can't convince producers of that biological fact. "I'm tired of being patted on the head," she moans.

Her plaint is one common to many actresses who started making movies in their teens. There have been exceptions — Elizabeth Taylor at 16 played Robert Taylor's wife in a movie.

"Debbie Reynolds would still be playing 'Tammy' if the headlines hadn't convinced producers she was a mature woman instead of a kid on the lot," says Jane.

Jane is happily married so she's not planning to get involved in the divorce courts or any other such drastic maneuvers, but careerwise, it's a big problem for her.

"I'm tired of playing the girl-next-door," she says. "What I need is a part where I play the girl in the house next door."

In a number of her Metro pictures and some television performances, Jane has come across as a sexy woman — especially when she forgets her cultured soprano voice for low down blues.

"Every time I do something like that," she says, "even my agents call me 'the new Jane Powell.' It really burns me up."

"There is no new Jane Powell."

I am—and always have been the same. They just can't get me out of that little girl mold.

"I want to do crazy things in the movies—things like Irene Dunne used to do, but I always get the same answer—and the same pat on the head. I can't wait around until movie musicals come back."

Jane thinks some of her trouble is related to her size—five feet. But she says, "Gloria Swanson is only 4 feet 11 but no one ever thought of her as anything but a siren. I guess it's just the way you get started in this business."

"My whole problem is that 'I'm just too normal. I sleep 2 hours every night, don't drink or smoke and when I play Las Vegas, don't even gamble."

"Who can be colorful with habits like those?" Still under 30, Jane feels that it's going to take another five or six years before producers will think of her as a woman.

"Teen-agers don't want to see a mother playing teen-age roles on the screen—yet that's the kind of scripts I get all the time."

Jane believes television is her salvation.

Meanwhile, Jane keeps up with her singing—takes a lesson every day. She's a perennial favorite at Hollywood Bowl where she packs the 20,000-seat amphitheater every season.

"I love to sing Rodgers and Hammerstein but I like to do Lena Horne songs too," says Jane.

"I'm really a big girl now."

TOO MUCH MONEY

Mrs. Van Doren Bemoans Her Fate

By RICK DU BROW
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mamie van Doren longs for the days when Hollywood's swains just chased her instead of her money.

Miss Van Doren, who has never made a movie that lost money, is one of film town's wealthiest bachelor girls—and, she sighed, the fortune-seekers are hot on her trail.

"I'm always meeting them," she said over coffee and pastry in her all-white hillside home. "You'll be called for more lavish movies—and I can go in on my own and didn't have anything, I thought it was tough because boys only wanted to make love."

"Now I wish that was all they wanted. I have other things to worry about."

The 27-year-old blonde's financial success stems from a series of low-budget films which are not likely to win artistic awards — pictures like her two latest, "Sex-Not Goes to College" and "The Private Lives of Adam and Eve."

"But," she said, "it's been part of my plan. By always making money for producers, I hope to become such a valuable asset that they'll be called for more lavish movies—and I can go in on my own terms."

"I made a picture called 'Untamed Youth' for $250,000, and it's made back 4 million. I think my plan is working. My next picture, 'College Confidential,' is with Steve Allen."

Miss van Doren, one of Hollywood's smartest "dumb blondes," is partners with producer Al Zugsmith in the company that films her movies.

"My house and car are paid for now, and I'm investing in stocks," she said. "People think I'm nutty for investing, but in 10 years it'll be important to me. And I'm going into apartment houses."

Miss van Doren, who wore tight tan slacks and a brown-and-white blouse, said she prefers to date men who have as much money as she does to protect herself from fortune-hunters.

Likes Crazy Things "But," she admitted, "some guys I date can't afford champagne, so I bring my own along. I drink only champagne. I like to do crazy things — like taking a couple of bottles of champagne and a date down to some beach place and listening to jazz with my hair in a mop. I love life. Nothing surprises me any more. "I like earthy guys—not mamby-pamby guys. Some of these guys I date, I think if there's a fight, I'll have to do the fighting for them."

Miss van Doren, who is divorced from Bandleader Ray Anthony, said her provocative manner sometimes made him jealous during their marriage.

"But that's what's a ball," she said. "You've got to have some fire in a marriage, and jealousy does it. If a guy has no fire, he leaves me cold. But Ray was about 15 years older than I was, and I decided I don't like older guys. They don't have enough fire, so now I'm going back to those my own age."

Preacher Given Eight Years On Incest Charge

JONESVILLE (Special) — A 39-year-old preacher, who resided near Jonesville with his wife and nine children, was transferred from the Catahoula Parish jail this week to begin an eight-year term at Angola.

Otha D. Jones was arrested Thursday, Feb. 4, by officers of the Catahoula parish sheriff's office following a charge of incest filed in the Seventh Judicial District Court by District Attorney D. W. Gibson.

Jones, who was arraigned before Judge Jesse McGee in the court at Harrisonburg last Saturday, entered a plea of guilty. He was given an eight-year sentence at hard labor in the state prison.

Veto War In Washington Seems Slated

By GEORGE MARDER
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — All signs point to another veto war this year between President Eisenhower and Democrats in Congress.

Perhaps a rougher and tougher one than last year. For this is a presidential election year and the political stakes are that much higher.

The tip-off on the veto battles to come developed in the Senate last week in the quick and easy passage of a federal aid to education bill.

The measure invites a veto by going against the administration policy on these counts:

It spends it too fast.

It spends some of it in the wrong places.

It spends some for the wrong things.

Let's go a bit more into detail on those four points.

The cost: The bill would cost the federal government $1,800,000,000 over the next two years. The administration measure would cost about $2,225,000,000 but over the next 25 years or so, and that would include interest.

Speed: The Democratic measure would be on pay-as-you-go. It would take the money right out of the Treasury for the schools at the rate of up to 900 million dollars a year.

The administration proposal was to build now and pay later. The government would merely share in the payments on school bonds each year. In no one year would the payments come close to 100 million dollars.

The Wrong Places: The Senate bill uses a formula to divide the federal education money to benefit first the poor states, and two, the states with the greatest school population. But all states would share, although not equally. The administration bill would help only those localities which can't borrow school money themselves.

The Wrong Things: The Senate-passed bill would provide some federal money to raise teachers' salaries. The administration is against that.

Those are the major differences between the Democratic bill and the administration proposals. They're sufficient to ring a certain veto if anything close to it passes the House.

There is some question whether the House will follow suit, even though the measure already is well below what northern liberals have proposed.

The leadership sentiment seems to be to trim the education measure somewhat further to make it that much more difficult for the President to veto.

But from what administration insiders are saying, anything which drains substantial amounts from the Treasury—instead of the White House approve pay later program—will meet with a veto.

Elected

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Austrian Conservative People's party yesterday elected 62-year-old Parliament Deputy President Dr. Alphons Gorbach as party chairman.

Gorbach succeeds Chancellor Julius Raab, 68, who has headed Austria's strongest party since 1952. Raab remains chancellor.

The reshuffle is part of the party's campaign for rejuvenation. The Conservatives suffered heavy losses in the 1959 national elections.

Actor Wants To Locate His Double

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There's an old saying that everybody has a double somewhere in the world and it's true, actor Steve Cochran would give anything to find his.

The ruggedly handsome Cochran isn't driven by a strong sense of vanity to find his look-alike though. It's cold hard cash that's providing the incentive.

"I've got TV series planned and certainly can't act in both of $10,000 worth of film showing me them at the same time," Steve said. "Once filming of my 'Renegade' series gets underway, I'll be playing the lead there."

"But, I also have ownership in 'That Man Rand' which I started filming long before the other show was offered to me. That's the reason for all this fuss."

"You see, I was going to play 'Clintor Rand' in the series which is a modern adventure show."

"So, last summer I went to Europe and filmed scenes of myself in places like Stockholm, London, Paris, Amsterdam and Copenhagen," he explained. "I'm in practically every foot of that film and plan to use it for 'Rand'."

"When I returned from Europe, NBC offered me the 'Renegade' part, and also agreed to finance my other series if I got out of it. The deal sounded good, so I son. More than 2,300 were killed, including 251 by bow and arrow,

Cochran has been besieged by actors' agents wanting to get their boy into the show.

"Agents have been pouring in and out of my office for weeks," he complained. "You should see some of the guys they insist look like my twin brother."

"Some are tall, skinny guys. Others are short, fat fellows. I stand six-foot-one but an agent had the nerve to tell me his five-foot six-inch actor would fill the bill. He said the guy could put his foot on his shoes."

SEEKING FACTS

Radio Turtles Planned In Gulf

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Gulf of Mexico fishermen may be startled this summer to see turtles with radios and brightly colored balloons on their backs.

The turtles may even be startled themselves if they realize what's going on.

What's actually going on is that Dr. Archie Carr, University of Florida biologist known as the turtle man, is seeking further facts on the green turtle, fast disappearing from the waters of the world.

Further research will take him with two or three students working on doctorates to Africa, Tortuguero in Costa Rica, Aves Island in the eastern Caribbean and Ascension Island — a pinpoint of land in the South Atlantic.

But his most colorful experiments will be in the Gulf.

He will bolt tiny transistor radios to the backs of turtles, tag them with helium-filled balloons and send them out to sea.

He hopes that by following these marked marine troopers for long distances he will establish that the green turtle is able to navigate long sea journeys and find its way home again to nest.

A $292,200 grant from the National Science Foundation is helping him in a continuing research project which he pioneered. It is aimed at getting information on the basic biology of the green turtle and, as an outgrowth, at re-supplying the Caribbean with them as a source of food.

He hopes that his turtle-tracking will support the idea that turtles are in a class with birds, salmon and seals as animal navigators.

The 2x2x3 inch radios will be held to the thick shells by screws. The reptile will oblige by coming to the surface to breathe and thus poke his radio antenna above the surface every minute. With a directional antenna and radio receiver a boat as far away as 10 to 15 miles thus may keep in contact.

The balloons will be at the end of long nylon lines and will be for the purpose of double-checking the turtle's course. Dr. Carr hopes the balloons can be spotted at least three or four miles away.

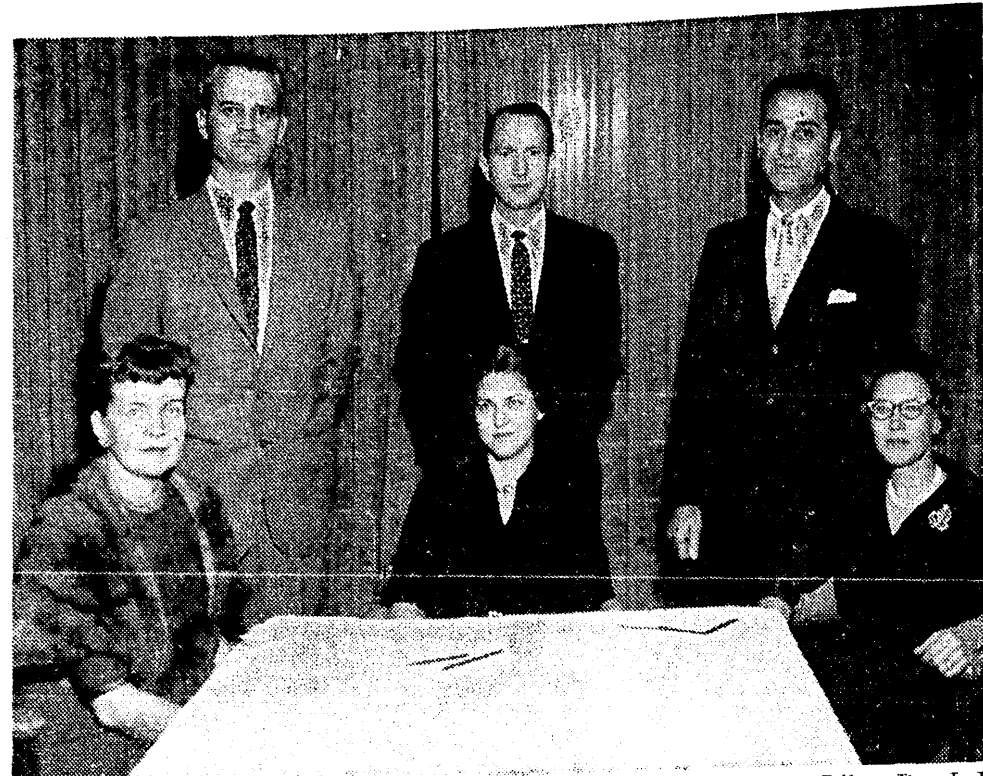

Some of the turtle tracking will take place off the Levy County coast between Yaucoetown and Cedar Key. Preliminary research has shown that green turtles caught at the mouth of the Withlacoochee River, hauled by truck 30 miles north to Cedar Key and released, will go back to the Withlacoochee.

By following the radio-equipped turtles, Dr. Carr thinks he will determine if they are following the shore line or finding their way home by compass sense through the open sea.

Tortuguero is the center of the biologist's continuing research and is considered the single remaining turtle nesting ground in the western Caribbean. Why turtles continue to return to a 20-mile stretch of beach there from distances of up to 1,000 miles is a question he hopes to answer.

Ascension is the center of much nesting by turtles which Dr. Carr believes come from Africa. He will attempt to prove this by tagging large numbers with metal tags inscribed in French. He hopes the turtles will be returned by African fishermen along the coast of French West Africa. His visit to that country will be for the purpose of explaining to African fishermen the aims of his program.

The once huge herds of sea turtles—credited with contributing to the settlement of the Caribbean much as the buffalo did to the opening of the American West—is dwindling. Turtle meat and eggs, once a staple food, are now considered a delicacy.

ATOMIC HEAT

Machine Changes Coal To Gasoline

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Atomic energy may yet, in a manner of speaking, drive automobiles. Engineers doubt that nuclear engines can be made compact and safe enough to replace the auto's internal combustion engine.

But scientists at the Atomic Energy Commission's Los Alamos (N.M.) laboratory are working on a revolutionary machine which would use atomic heat to transform coal into gasoline.

Coal's chemical energy derives from the nuclear energy of the sun whose light in eons past nourished the rank vegetation which became today's fossil fuels.

Petroleum, on which the world now relies for gasoline, also is fossilized sunlight. But it is no where near as plentiful as coal. Man is expected to run out of oil centuries before his coal supply fails.

What the Los Alamos scientists propose to do is to tap the atom for the immense amounts of heat needed to change solid, bulky coal into the more convenient form of liquid synthetic gasoline.

They have designed a unique atomic reactor, nicknamed "the Turret," with which they expect to achieve an operating temperature of 2,400 degrees Fahrenheit. Construction is expected to start at Los Alamos late this year, with operation scheduled for the spring of 1962. The turret is expected to cost about three million dollars in construction and equipment.

What makes the turret revolutionary is the fact that its fuel elements will be naked and will be contained in a revolving core which will simplify recharging and assure more complete "burn-up."

Atomic fuel elements conventionally are canned in metal to keep radioactive fission products locked up inside. But this cladding, or canning, automatically puts a limit on the temperatures which can be attained. The metal jackets rupture when the heat gets too high.

The buildup of fission products inside the jackets also requires that a reactor be shut down at frequent intervals for recharging and reprocessing long before the fuel is spent.

The turret's unclad elements will consist of uranium-impregnated graphite porous enough to permit escape of the fission products into the coolant.

The coolant, helium gas, will carry these products away and will be continuously purified. A gas-tight pressure shell around the core and coolant will itself be enclosed in steel to assure safety.

When the time comes for refueling, remote controls will rotate the core and a loading mechanism will push spent elements out of their channels and replace them with new ones while the reactor continues to operate.

The turret is a joint project of the AEC and the Bureau of Mines.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The "prescription" wasn't in the traditional Latin but druggist Thomas H. Garnett got the message.

A man handed him a note, which read "This is a sickup." "Now," said the robber, "fill that prescription."

Garnett handed over the money in a cash register and presumably the patient felt better immediately.

Contest Finals

To Be Held At Legion Post Here

The Parish finals of the American Legion National Oratorical contest will be held at 7:30 p.m. February 15 during the regular meeting of the L. B. Faulk Post No. 12, American Legion.

The affair will take place at the Legion Home in Forsythe Park and finalist from four local high schools will participate.

The theme of the Oratorical contest will be based on the Constitution of the United States. Three judges from the speech departments of Northeast Louisiana State College and a local attorney will be on hand to select the winners.

The Parish Champion will receive a silver medal and an opportunity to represent Ouachita Parish in the district contest to be held at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston, at a later date.

SAVING FROM SCRAPS

MECHANICSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The U. S. Navy reports it's anything but down in the mouth about the results of a scheme to salvage scraps, sweepings and discard items from its dental laboratories.

Operating under the theory that gold is where you find it, the Navy undertakes a regular collection of old crowns, bridges, fillings and dentures as well as dust and grindings from dental lab work.

The products of this broomstick prospecting are shipped from Pennsylvania and Maryland dental labs to the Mechanicsburg Naval Supply Depot.

The result when the "waste" is melted down every year or so, says disposal officer L. H. R. Davis, over $15,000 in gold and silver.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Contrasts In Cedar Trees

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The gray and silvery needles of the true cedar trees contrast beautifully with our wild junipers which we call "cedars". Our "cedars" are, of course, Juniperus virginiana, while the deodar cedar is Cedrus deodara, the Atlas cedar is Cedrus atlantica and the cedar of Lebanon is Cedrus libanica.

The true cedars have always been popular. The least showy of the three is the cedar of Lebanon out of which Solomon built the temple, but, in spite of its short needles and somewhat ragged appearance, people have planted it in church yards and cemeteries in the past. On the Atlas Mountains of North Africa, the great forests of Atlas cedar grow. The stiff glaucous needles of these handsome trees and their ease of cultivation here in the south made them very popular at one time. In cemeteries and on old estates, you can see occasionally the "blue" form of this tree, and a thing of rare beauty it is.

DEODAR CEDAR
It took a tree of rather stunning beauty to compete with the blue Atlas cedar, but such a tree came along shortly after the turn of this century. For the last fifty years, the deodar cedar has enjoyed an immense popularity. The first of these trees that were introduced into cultivation were too tender to cold to withstand the sudden dips in temperature east of the Mississippi River, but very soon a harder type was brought in from colder parts of the Himalayas, and people planted them not only in cemeteries and church yards but in their own yards and gardens, too.

Young specimens of any of the cedars have that appealing beauty of the youthful conifer: the "Christmas tree" shape. The Atlas and deodar cedars are almost silvery in some of their forms. We need these trees for contrast to so much that is green in our winter landscapes. When given plenty of room and planted in the right places, they can be especially fine features in the winter picture.

All of the cedars grow to be up to 120 feet tall when mature, so it is easy to see why they scarcely will fit onto a small lawn except, of course, where there is to be nothing else of any size. Where there is room and where cedars can be planted at some distance from the house, they will reach up to thirty or forty feet in about twenty years and give the marvelous effect of a great coniferous forest in the winter. In forty to fifty years—sometimes less—the upright growth may stop and the upper limbs lengthen out into a horizontal pattern. When the trees are well fed instead of starving, this horizontal pattern is beautiful, too, as it gives something of the "wind blown" appearance of the Turrey pines.

THE HOME SHIFT

Early Blooms On Pearl Bush

By MILDRED SWIFT

The pearl bush just outside my bedroom window has been blooming since January 10. The cold didn't even wilt a blossom, but then the shrub is protected. Pearl bush is a mass of white blossoms in its prime. Blossoms look a little like dogwood and are lovely used as cut flowers.

The ground below the pearl bush is planted in violets and they are covered with blossoms as all the plants are in this area. The yellow buttercups are blooming so well this year. That's the old-fashioned yellow that stays the same size and thrives well if they're never transplanted. Romena Ramage, Wimsboro, gave me these bulbs twenty-two years ago. They have been in the same spot all those years. They are fed most every year.

The snow white denudata magnolia should have bloomed in January, but maybe the cold postponed that. They are beautiful, but last only a short time and often the freeze gets the blossoms. If you have a large garden, you'd want one of this variety, a small garden, no.

GARDEN JOBS
If you have a ligustrum cape jasmine or any plant that has been neglected, it is too large and ill shaped, cut it back to a foot or two from the ground. Fertilize now and again in June. It will put out new growth and you'll have a nicely shaped plant. This will take a few years to get a full grown plant, but it will be well worth the wait.

When you prune your roses, wait on the climbing ones. Cut those back after they quit blooming.

Get your beds ready for planting nasturtium seed when the soil is dry enough. They like cool weather and die when the June sun gets hot.

Root cuttings of pussy willow. They'll root in water or in the ground. If you have a tree that is 10 to 15 years of age, better root another. These are short-lived trees. The limbs with open buds are gorgeous in flower arrangements.

If you like the "gray" look, plant santalina. It's a bushy kind of plant for small areas. It can be used as a small shrub or as a ground cover. Santalina is a mossy looking plant, likes a dry place in full sun. It's excellent for planter boxes, since they're usually in a hot sunny place. The Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center on Oliver Road has lots of this santalina planted at the front of the building.

This is a wonderful time to root ivy. The easiest way is to root just where the plant is going to stay. First cover the area with a mulch. Pine straw is best. Put the piece of ivy, not over 6 or 8 inches long, in the ground and let it rest on the mulch. The new top rest on the mulch. This straw serves two purposes. It keeps the ivy from drying out while the ivy is taking control. The mulch keeps the ground cool and damp—which is just what the ivy needs to get off to a good start. That way, nine out of ten cuttings will root. It takes about three years to get dense growth. The variegated ivy is much harder to root. In fact I have trouble getting it to grow when I buy a rooted plant. In Baton Rouge, there's a large leaf green and white ivy climbing on a support of brick grill work against a pink brick house. It's the prettiest, daintiest effect. Maybe it's because pink is my favorite color. In January, February and March are considered the best months for grafting camellias. Call for one of our camellia bulletins and read what Dr. Hanchey says about grafting.

JAPANESE MAGNOLIAS
If you're planning to plant some Japanese magnolias (often incorrectly called the tulip tree) these are your varieties: Lennel—flowers large, deep crimson on outside; a later bloomer. Alba superba, white. Bronzonii—white shaded purple. Cyathiformis—cup shaped, light purple. Grandis—white outer petals, purple at base and in the center. Rustica—deep purple. Speciosa—white, striped purple outside. Triumphans, pink toward outside base, magenta dark base purple outside, pink inside; alexandrina pointed blossoms, pinkish lavender.

The nurseries have some of these varieties and others. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery conducted a nation-wide election last fall to guide congress in its choice for the U. S. flower. You probably voted. We are one of the few nations which still does not have an official flower. Both Houses of Congress have been pondering the question for forty-one years.

The rose rolled up a tally of 186,000 votes, more than twice as many as its nearest competitor, the carnation. More than one million votes were cast as the rose swept forty eight of the fifty states.

HINTS
Hate to throw anything away? Here's an idea: When your plastic raincoat becomes too shabby for wear, cut it off to waist length, shorten the sleeves, and use it as a "cosmetic cape" while you wash your hair, apply make up or do any chore which requires a bit of protection. Keep it clean by wiping with a sudsy sponge.

Every year at this time we start trying to figure ways to add a breath of spring to winter weary wardrobes. One of the most popular is to add a light, bright wool. It will go a long way toward picking up that winter wardrobe.

Bright and colorful accessories also go a long way toward giving winter clothes a new lease on life. Gay scarves, the new bright fashion, "dog collar" and choker necklaces, bright earrings and gold or silver jewelry will add a lot to a dark wool costume which is just what the

Camera News

SIGHT AND SOUND have been combined in the first 8mm sound movie camera. Mother presses one button and hears through earphones what the microphone (on table) records as she films the birthday scene.

AMATEUR HOME MOVIES with sound are now a practical reality. The first 8mm home movie sound system was successfully demonstrated in New York City recently in advance of its national introduction in late April.

The system consists of a single pushbutton 8mm turret sound camera using a new color film with a narrow, magnetic-striped edge which can be seen and heard on a sound projector-recorder.

It is a practical reality because the bulk, the weight, the operation and the cost has been kept down to a reasonable degree. Turret camera with self-contained battery pack, amplifier and microphone weighs less than five pounds and the projector-recorder weighs 23 pounds. Total cost of the system is less than $500.

Heretofore sound movie cameras have been limited to professional use because of their bulky power source and amplifier, their complex operation and the cost which ranged from $700 to $2,000.

The "home talkies" system for amateur photographers is the accomplishment of the Fairchild Camera and Instrument Corp.

The Cinephon Eight camera has a three-lens turret camera with a 13mm f-1.3 fixed focus normal lens. Accessory telephoto and wide angle lenses will fit in the standard D-mounts. The power source for filming and sound is provided by a hermetically sealed nickel cadmium battery which can be recharged from an electric light socket. Fully charged, the battery will operate 800 to 900 feet of sound filming. A single button works both the sound and picture shooting. A hand microphone picks up the sound simultaneously with the action which goes to the camera body's completely transistorized printed circuit with a 4-stage amplifier. The emphasis is on speech reproduction.

A headset is also plugged into the camera body so that the photographer can monitor the sound volume and adjust it during filming.

A new color film has been made for the camera by Ansco. It has a 25-mil magnetic stripe and comes in 50-foot, double-rolls so that movie makers can shoot 100 feet on each roll. It will have a film speed of ASA 12 for tungsten, 10 for daylight (with 35 B filter) and will cost $7.50 per roll, processing extra. The 8mm sound projector has an all black costume. Since checks and plaids are so much in the spotlight in the new collections, you might consider a jacket of black and white check or plaid to give a new look to your not-so-new black wool dress. Or, use a bright color. Designers refer to these as "screaming colors."

The most glamorous of the new evening fashions are the beautiful beaded dresses. These range from all over beaded sheaths to those with beaded bodices only. They are used most frequently on white or delicate pastel, although bright reds, greens and blues are also seen.

Today's beauty hint is a reminder that the new winter coiffures leave a different look. The bouffant halo which has been so prominent on the fashion scene these past several years are now reduced to normal proportions. Hair is taking a closer, sleeker line so that the natural shape of the head is most often the important feature.

a built-in amplifier, a recording and erase head, a microphone and separately-housed six inch speaker unit. It can project 8mm sound movies, record on 8mm magnetically striped film, erase previous sound or overlay additional sound on anything previously recorded.

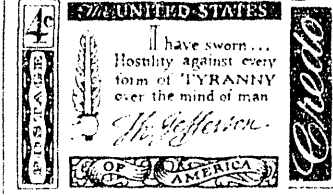

Sound can be recorded and played back at either 16 or 24 frames per second. Each 400 film reel will run about 25 minutes.

The projector switch hook-up automatically turns off the room light when the projector starts running. Light is provided by a special pre-focused 150 watt lamp which casts a beam equivalent to 7.50 watts on the screen.

STAMP NEWS

The third of the "American Creed" stamps will feature the statement by Thomas Jefferson, "I have sworn... Hostility against every form of TYRANNY over the mind of man."

It will be first placed on sale May 18 at Charlottesville, Va. The dedicatory ceremonies will be held in Jefferson's home, Monticello, that day and will be sponsored by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

This new stamp will closely follow the others in the set as far as design is concerned. In the center to the left of the statement will be a hand holding aloft a flaming torch. Below, to the right, will be the signature of the third President.

The first of the "Creed" stamps, honoring George Washington, was released Jan. 20. The second, bearing Benjamin Franklin's counsel, will be issued March 23 at Philadelphia.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations of the 4-cent Jefferson stamp may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Charlottesville, Va., prior to May 18.

In a housecleaning move, the U. S. Bureau of Engraving and Printing has cancelled 359 stamp printing plates during October. Some of these plates saw very small printings and it is certain some plate number blocks will be eagerly sought by collectors. Plates include commemorative issues of 1956, 1957 and 1958 (starting with the 3-cent Pure Food and Drug commemorative and concluding with the 3-cent International Geophysical Year issue).

Poland reports that it plans to issue a "Famous Scientists of the World" set. Depicted on the stamps will be portraits of famous men of science: Charles Darwin, Dmitri Mendeleev, Albert Einstein, Louis Pasteur, Isaac Newton and Nicolaus Copernicus.

The PHILATELIC MAGAZINE in London reports that Bulzaria has issued a 1-leve blue and pink stamp honoring the meeting between President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev. It features a jet plane and the Statue of Liberty.

Hassle Grows Over National Flower Choice

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

There is a garden variety of politics, too. Right now the garden party campaign is at its peak. And like the prosaic types of politics, involving party lines, elections and such, this battle will reach its climax in Washington.

At stake in the garden politics, raging for many years, is selection of this country's national flower. (We haven't got one.) It is likely that Congress will make its choice at the current session. You can send a letter to your congressman if you want to get into the fray. This battle has not been ignored by noted public opinion polls.

Two of the top contenders are the rose and the marigold. Please forgive us if we don't mention your candidate, but just as there are Democrats and Republicans, so are there roses and marigolds. Both have many supporters.

Leaders of both the marigold and rose factions have axes to grind. The average person can only have a limited number and therefore should use care in selecting varieties that are known to be good.

HINTS FOR HOMEMAKER
Fabrics with a permanent finish (such as resin) shouldn't be soaked as prolonged soaking may destroy the finish. Instead pre-treat badly soiled areas with thick soap or detergent suds, rubbing in gently with your fingers or a soft brush.

Puree left over vegetables in the blender then place mixture in an ice cube tray with divider. Thaw frozen vegetable cubes as baby needs them.

Colored foil is available on the market now. May like to use it for festive occasions as place cards, nut cups or displaying foods as baked potatoes, ham, and cookies.

A few of the newer and perhaps more exotic frozen foods include candied carrots, whole mushrooms, fried shrimp, shredded coconut, shish kebabs and complete frozen dinners with an international flavor.

If you are using drier or nylon thread, put a felt pad under spool or spindle of sewing machine. This prevents slipping of thread. Be sure that notch of spool is at top.

Good Drainage For Low Soil

By AUDREY DAWSON

If old man winter is kind to us and gives us some good weather, the next few weeks is the time to get a great deal of planting and transplanting done in our garden. This is an excellent time to plant that camellia you have been planning to get. The location you select largely determines whether your plant will grow successfully. Good drainage is the first essential, this means a soil that does not stay waterlogged in periods of wet weather. Partial shade is essential for small plants and some shade is beneficial to larger ones. Do not put plants when soil is muddy. A high percentage of organic material should be present in the soil. This may be supplied in the form of leaf or woods mulch.

The number of varieties of camellias is said to run into the thousands and range in color from white to dark red. Nearly any variety of camellia will produce some pretty flowers, but some are more consistent and considered to be better than others. The average person can only have a limited number and therefore should use care in selecting varieties that are known to be good.

SEWING WORKSHOP
I worked with another group of homemakers this week at the Agricultural Building in West Monroe. These homemakers were from the Colony and Drew Home Demonstration clubs. They learned the newest short cuts to sewing which included putting in a zipper without pins or hand basting, to make a tailored belt, to make bound buttonholes, the short method, making a tailored collar and many new tricks at the machine. Homemakers taking part were: Mrs. Lester Cox, Mrs. C. C. Bodenbough, Mrs. Martha Henry, Mrs. A. W. Wiley, Mrs. W. A. Carr, Mrs. N. L. Huckabee, Mrs. Ray Grayson, Mrs. J. N. Neely, Mrs. M. H. Goddard, Mrs. J. R. Hile, Mrs. Percy Neely, Mrs. J. Roy Little, Mrs. R. W. Higwood, Mrs. E. W. Earl, Mrs. W. M. Roberts from Colony and Mrs. V. C. Brister and Mrs. B. L. Morris from Drew.

Bastrop Club Winter Show

By MARY JARDINE

A colorful midwinter flower show was presented by members of the Bastrop Garden Club. Blue ribbons in the horticulture class were presented to: Miss Ida Harrington for paper white narcissus and Grand Soleil d'or (a bright golden yellow of the tazetta group) and Mrs. B. O. Priest for Camellia Leucantha (white single large petals). Object of much interest was Mrs. Priest's vigorous plant of Vegetable-pear (Michelia). Fruit of these plants is much prized as a vegetable in south Louisiana and tropical areas. Light green in color and of an odd shape, the entire fruit, containing one seed is planted early, and kept indoors until frost is over. In a fertile soil it forms a vigorous vine similar in appearance to cucumber with gray green foliage and many tendrils which seek support of the trellis. The numerous light green fruits (about 50 to 100 per plant) may be cooked as you would squash or eggplant. Very delicious.

In the arrangement section Mrs. Charles Gray was awarded top score for her line arrangement featuring camellias and quince. The container was most interesting, a tall pewter vase with a Dutch scene embossed over it. It was an excellent choice for the plant materials selected. Mrs. Gray arranged a graceful triangular line with three deep red camellias in the center as a focus of interest. Very arresting, started against a soft pink background.

BRIGHT DIAGONAL
Mrs. W. H. Stephenson created a bright and golden diagonal design featuring narcissus. A gold pitcher set on a gold base served as a container. The massed diagonal line, following the contour of the pitcher, was composed of early yellow narcissus (N. minor) with the brighter yellow Grand Soleil d'or massed in the center. Glossy green boxwood extended the line. A true promise of spring.

VOLUNTEERS DRILLING
ACCRA, Ghana (UPI)—Ghana volunteers are drilling for possible service in an African brigade to help the Algerian Moslem rebels. About 100 volunteers, mostly ex-servicemen, are training here and others have enlisted in other parts of the country. The African conference in Tunis decided on formation of the brigade last week, but no further steps have been taken to set it up.

FROZEN FRIED CHICKEN

Fried chicken can look and taste just as good four days later if leftover pieces are frozen. Research has shown that freshly fried chicken eaten immediately, and freshly fried chicken which has been frozen and then thawed for eating, can't be distinguished for flavor and appearance if the freezing is properly done. If the good flavor and appearance are to be retained, the freshly fried chicken, held not more than 3 hours at room temperature, should be wrapped in foil or wax paper, then thawed at room temperature for serving.

Our food preservation specialist, Miss Estelle Fournet, advised us that the newest idea for the near future in preservation of foods will be sterilized by nuclear radiation. Foods so treated will require no refrigeration facilities and will remain in a whole, some and attractive state for long periods of time. It is wise to remember, however, that no end product is likely to be better than the original raw material. The quality of the original product is the most important factor.

SEWING WORKSHOP
I worked with another group of homemakers this week at the Agricultural Building in West Monroe. These homemakers were from the Colony and Drew Home Demonstration clubs. They learned the newest short cuts to sewing which included putting in a zipper without pins or hand basting, to make a tailored belt, to make bound buttonholes, the short method, making a tailored collar and many new tricks at the machine. Homemakers taking part were: Mrs. Lester Cox, Mrs. C. C. Bodenbough, Mrs. Martha Henry, Mrs. A. W. Wiley, Mrs. W. A. Carr, Mrs. N. L. Huckabee, Mrs. Ray Grayson, Mrs. J. N. Neely, Mrs. M. H. Goddard, Mrs. J. R. Hile, Mrs. Percy Neely, Mrs. J. Roy Little, Mrs. R. W. Higwood, Mrs. E. W. Earl, Mrs. W. M. Roberts from Colony and Mrs. V. C. Brister and Mrs. B. L. Morris from Drew.

Minor clashes between Cuban factions in Miami are common places. Among the more serious ones was a near-riot at the home of Rolando Masferrer Rojas last summer.

Masferrer once headed a private army in Batista's Cuba, and is a former senator. During the melee at his home, the Cuban consul, Alonso Hidalgo, was beaten and arrested for disturbing the peace—charges later dismissed as a violation of diplomatic immunity.

Demonstrations don't always take violent form. Last October anti-Castro men in Miami celebrated Jose Marti Day by placing white roses on the revolutionary hero's bust in Bayfront Park, and draping black crepe over the marble pedestal—apparently to symbolize the death of liberty in Cuba.

The pro-Castro faction isn't idle, either. A while ago Castro's representatives here tried to organize local Cubans to spy on counter-revolutionary activities.

Printed circulars were distributed among Cubans and other Latin Americans living in Miami urging them to inform on activities of the anti-Castro exiles.

With the return of pro-Castro exiles to Cuba after Castro's assumption of power, and the influx of Batista refugees, the Castro faction here is outnumbered. "Most of the criminals wanted by our government are hiding right here," said a secretary in the Cuban consulate.

The more substantial and responsible political exiles cause no trouble in Miami. Their activities are in the open, and they carefully refrain from violations of neutral soil. But there are enough hotheads to keep the kettle boiling.

Among the more prominent anti-Castro organizations is one called the "White Rose," headed by Rafael Diaz Balart, a former brother-in-law of Castro who lives in New York.

Ike Doesn't Want Vice-Presidency

"Unemployed Presidents" Editor's Note: The Justice Department has ruled that a president could run for vice president after serving his maximum two terms in the White House. The following dispatch discusses the attitude of various American chief executives toward post-White House employment.

By ROBERT J. SERLING
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) —Dwight

Eisenhower says he isn't interested in being a vice president after he leaves the White House — and he has plenty of company in that view.

Most American presidents with a few notable exceptions, have preferred a life of quiet rest and retirement after serving in the world's toughest job. And they definitely wanted no lesser public post after tasting the glory of the presidency.

"It would be unseemly to take anything else," President Richard Nixon once said.

Thomas Jefferson felt the same way. So did other presidents, although some accepted special assignments which they felt were for the good of the country and in no way degrading to an ex-chief executive.

But John Quincy Adams, who served 17 years in the House of Representatives after leaving the White House, considered his congressional post as honorable as the presidency.

"No person would be degraded by serving the people as a representative in congress," Adams insisted. "Nor would an ex-president of the United States be degraded by serving as a selectman of a town, if elected thereto by the people."

President James Monroe apparently agreed with Adams. When his term was up, he accepted appointment as a lowly justice of the peace.

The other exception to the "I couldn't take a lesser job after being president" school was Andrew Johnson. He was elected to the Senate after narrowly escaping impeachment by that body while he was president. John Tyler, after he served as president, was a member of the Confederate Congress.

William Howard Taft became Chief Justice of the United States following his presidential term, but he always felt the court post was as much of an honor if not greater than the presidency itself.

Then governor Thomas Dewey of New York once wanted to name former President Herbert Hoover to the U.S. Senate, but Hoover declined. Hoover, however, did accept a number of special assignments, including the famous government reorganization commission that bore his name.

There are many political students who feel it is foolish not to utilize the services of men who have acquired wisdom and skill in the presidency. They have proposed making ex-presidents non-voting members of the Senate (an idea heartily supported by former President Truman), or that the out-going chief executive serve as an ex-officio member of his suc-

Airplane Is Symbol Of Modern Farms

The airplane is joining the tractor and the combine as a symbol of modern farming. New jobs for the airplane on the farm are being found every day.

According to information brought out during the recent annual conferences of the Louisiana Agricultural Aerial Applicators' Association at Louisiana State University, about 500 airplanes are used for farm work of various kinds in this state each year. They are used to apply insecticide to such crops as cotton, rice, sugar cane, pasture and forage crops; to seed rice, pasture crops, and pine trees; to fertilize rice, pasture, and forage crops; to apply herbicides for weed control in rice, sugar cane and pastures; and to apply herbicides for brush control in forests and wooded areas.

HEAVY USE
About 2,500 planes are used for such purposes in the Southern states. Last year they applied about 400,000,000 pounds of agricultural chemicals to 20,000,000 acres of land.

Crop-dusting, is one of the oldest enterprises in the field of aviation. One of the major airlines operating in the South was founded a generation ago as a crop-dusting outfit.

3-DAY OBSERVANCE

Religious Emphasis Week Set At College

Northeast Louisiana State College Monday opens a three-day observance to promote religious emphasis at the college.

Students, faculty and staff will take part in the annual observance of Religious Emphasis Week, scheduled Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Highlight of the week is a series of three addresses — one each morning — at a campus convocation.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Perry Webb Jr., who has been pastor of the First Baptist Church in Natchitoches for eight years. He will present a different address each day on the general theme of "Christianity: A Modern Challenge to Youth."

ARRANGED

Daytime and evening seminars have also been arranged as part of the Religious Emphasis activities.

A reception has been scheduled Sunday from 4 to 6 p.m. at the president's home on campus in honor of the guest speaker. The Inter-Faith Council and President and Mrs. George T. Walker invite students, faculty, staff and friends of the college to attend. The public has also been invited to attend the convocations, which will be held at 11:20 a.m. on campus in Brown Hall Auditorium Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Morning classes students to attend the addresses by the Rev. Mr. Webb.

Faculty seminars have been scheduled daily at 4 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge in the Administration Building. Monday at 6 p.m. a seminar will convene at the Baptist Student Center, and at the same time Tuesday seminars will be held in the dormitories. Wednesday is evaluation night with seminars scheduled in each religious center on campus. The seminars will consist of discussions complementing Webb's message of the day.

ANNUAL

Religious Emphasis Week is an annual observance sponsored by the Religious Activities Committee and the Inter-Faith Council. The committee, composed of faculty members, is in charge of campus religious events. The council is an organization made up of representatives and advisers from campus religious groups.

Marcus Mapp of the Northeast faculty heads the committee, and Betty Jane McCartney, a senior from Bonita, is president of the council. Special committees were also appointed for arrangements, music and publicity.

The guest speaker at the convocations, the Rev. Mr. Webb, is a native of Malvern, Ark., and has lived in Blytheville and Pine Bluff, Ark., and San Antonio, Tex. He attended Texas Military Institute and received his B.A. degree from Baylor University and his B.D. degree from Southern Seminary.

Webb was pastor at Enon Baptist Church in Westfield, Ill., during his seminary days and at the First Baptist Church in Poteet, Tex., for three years before going to Natchitoches.

He is on the Executive Board of the Louisiana Baptist Convention and has been president of the District Eight Convention.

Five Injured In Collision Near Okaloosa

Five persons, including an 11-month-old girl, were taken to St. Francis hospital yesterday in the aftermath of a two-car collision on an icy road near Okaloosa. Still at the hospital last night were Mrs. Johnnie W. George, 38, of 706 Jewel Street, West Monroe and her daughter, Debora, 11 months.

Mrs. George incurred severe bruises in the mishap, while the child suffered severe shock.

Three other persons were released after receiving emergency treatment. They were Ronald T. George, 23; Albert A. Rogers, 54, Route 1, Eros; and George T. Warren, 13.

According to Troop F, Louisiana State Police, no charges were filed, due to the hazardous conditions of the roads.

Sports Lingo Works For Some

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sometimes, the best way to get an idea across is to put it in sports talk. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey tried it last week.

Rockefeller, the New York governor who almost ran for the Republican presidential nomination, turned to baseball to poke fun at the Democratic party and its squad of candidates.

The Democrats, Rockefeller said, remind him of the old daffy Dodgers, who used to play for Brooklyn. He recalled that the Dodgers once "wound up with three runners trying to reach third base simultaneously."

Humphrey, the Minnesota senator who is running hard for the Democratic presidential nomination, chose football for his figure of speech.

It's well known, the senator said that he has a lot of second-choice strength among the Los Angeles convention delegates who'll do the nominating.

And when time begins to run out, he predicted, "they'll have to look down the bench and see which one can make the touchdown."

Another declared candidate for the Democratic nomination, Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, sounded meanwhile like an exasperated prize fighter.

Kennedy's irritation was directed toward Democrats who won't come out and fight with him and Humphrey in the presidential primaries.

He said these politicians "wish to be nominated, but do not wish to meet the people." Then he added pointedly: "If I get beaten in the primaries, I'm out."

The two men Kennedy was primarily daring to come out and fight—Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas and Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri—made progress of a sort.

Rockefeller's baseball comparison came in a speech that attracted attention also because he at last mentioned Vice President Richard M. Nixon. It was the first time he had spoken of Nixon in public since withdrawing from the presidential contest last December.

Rockefeller confined his mention to say that Nixon, now a shoo-in for the GOP nomination, was clear and forthright in saying the Republicans shouldn't be smug about past achievements.

Nixon, for his part, continued to look comfortable in his role of GOP heir apparent, with no present need to tangle with anybody.

He said he would ignore personal attacks even though, as he put it, the Democratic aspirants seem more interested "in a contest as to who can call the worse names rather than who can provide the best leadership."

Last week's meeting of AFL-CIO big wheels at Miami Beach produced some political news:

Stop-Watch Bill Would Ban Use In Post Office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Frank M. Karsten (D-Mo.) proposed Saturday that Congress outlaw use of stop-watches and other devices to check on the work production of post office employees.

He said a new post office system of recording individual output has carried the department back into the dark ages and is making

1. President George Meany said that once the Democrats and Republicans make their selections, "I'm quite sure we're going to endorse a candidate." In the past the AFL-CIO endorsement has always been for the Democrat.

2. Lee W. Minton, a member of the AFL-CIO executive Council, said: "It would be foolish for the Republicans to nominate anyone else but Secretary of Labor James O. Mitchell to run with Nixon. I don't think any Democratic combination could beat them."

"galley slaves" of employees. The Missouri has introduced a bill to make such practices illegal. "The stop-watch," he said, "is being used in the same manner that the ancient galley overseer used the whip."

Karsten outlined the post office system, as it works in St. Louis, in a letter to Chairman Tom Murray (D-Tenn.) of the House Post Office Committee, urging the committee to consider his bill to outlaw it.

The bill would forbid supervisors "to use a stopwatch or other timing or measuring device, or to make a time study of a postal employee's work, or to use a unit system, scale, or any weighing or measuring device, or any other method to measure the amount of mail distributed by a post office clerk."

The procedure Karsten complained about is known as "the distribution guides system." It has been a subject of bitter protests from several other members of Congress.

Queen Victoria's luxurious private railway cars, built in 1869, were given gas lighting. But, the Queen ordered oil lamps and candles to replace the gas jets.

$6 MILLION PRODUCTION

'Solomon, Sheba' At Paramount

One of the most spectacular motion pictures ever produced, "Solomon and Sheba," opens today at the Paramount Theatre through United Artists release.

Produced on an epic scale, "Solomon and Sheba," a King Vidor production, was filmed in Technicolor and Technirama on location in Spain at a cost of better than $6,000,000, thus making it one of the most expensive pictures ever made. It is an overwhelmingly lavish film in the most opulent of Hollywood traditions.

Yul Brynner and Gina Lollobrigida are starred as Solomon and Sheba. George Sanders, as Adonijah, the vicious, intriguing brother of Solomon, is co-starred with Marisa Pavan as Abishag, the Israelite maiden whose unrequited love for Solomon brings about her tragic death. Heading the strong supporting cast are such internationally renowned players as John Crawford, Jean Anderson, Jack Gwillim, Harry Andrews, Laurence Naismith, Finlay Currie, Maruchi Fresno and many others. In addition, the cast is composed of thousands — quite literally — of extras and bit players. "Solomon and Sheba" was directed by King Vidor, one of the great and distinguished names of "spectacle" pictures.

An Edward Small presentation, "Solomon and Sheba" was produced by Ted Richmond. Anthony Veiller, Paul Dudley and George Bruce wrote the screenplay, using the materials of the Bible for all elements of the story. Freddie Young, the noted British cinematographer, was chief cameraman. Mario Nascimbene composed the musical score.

A freight train forty cars long was required to transport the company, crew, equipment and props of "Solomon and Sheba" from Madrid to the Los Monogros desert near Zaragoza, Spain, for battle scenes in the film.

Among the spectacular scenes on the call sheets of "Solomon and Sheba" were the enormous battle — sequences (perhaps the most vivid ever filmed) between the Israelites and the Egyptians, a full — scale pagan orgy, Sheba's eye — opening bath, the stoning of Sheba by outraged Israelites, the destruction of the great temple by lightning, scenes in Solomon's harem, and an assassination scene in which one of the attackers goes up in flames.

20th CENTURY-FOX

Official Outlines Plans For Movie Productions

By BILL HARDIN Staff Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Twentieth Century-Fox Pictures plans a $70 million production budget next year for what has been described as blockbuster and family type pictures. The plans, plus a brief resume of the larger film attractions in the coming year, were outlined by Alex Harrison, vice-president of the company at a meeting this past week.

Harrison spoke optimistically to company officials from throughout the United States and to representatives of newspapers in the Gulf South area. He said his company was taking a lead in what is hoped to be a trend throughout the motion picture industry — the return to making pictures for the whole family, not the horror flickers such as have plagued the theatres for several years.

The company official, who had met with others for three days said his company had "lost its shirt" last year productwise, but the studio boss, Spross Skouras, set aside $70 for the next 52 weeks. But despite this background, the company is hoping for and frankly expects to recapture a lion's share of the movie-going public with its motion picture either recently completed, now in production or in the planning stages. Then Harrison methodically listed the larger ones, giving a brief comment on each. These were:

LISTS PICTURES

"Journey to the Center of the Earth" which has already played in many theatres in Louisiana, and which has been well received by the public.

"The Story on Page One," which is presently playing in many theatres, and has already shown at the Paramount Theatre in Monroe, it, too, is coming up to expectations box office-wise.

"Dog of Flanders," a low budget picture which, Harrison frankly said, is a "real sleeper," a family-type picture which will bring David Ladd, already a star of some importance (son of Actor Man Ladd), into real stardom in the motion picture industry. Filmed in the Low Countries of Europe, the picture is considered one of the best family type movies in the field today. Twentieth Century makes no pretension of its hopes for this particular flicker.

"The Wild River," filmed in Cleveland, Tennessee.

"The Story of Ruth," based on the Bible and bringing to the screen an unknown, a young actress from Israel.

"From a Terrace" the film version of a best seller years ago.

Let's Make Love" with Marilyn Monroe and the new French find, Yves Montand and British singer, Frankie Vaughan. The casting for this picture has already been made 16 times, but hopes are that now the top stars are complete. Originally Gregory Peck was to play the top male lead, but a dispute in the size of the role caused Peck to withdraw. Negotiations were not successful in placing Rock Hudson in the top role. So the French actor-singer was screened and now has the role.

SEQUELS

"Return to Peyton Place" a sequel to the box office success "Peyton Place," with the same top cast — if the studio can convince Diane Varsi that she should give up her self-imposed exile in Vermont. This picture will also be directed by the same director, Jerry Wald, as "Peyton Place."

Harrison continued on listing the larger productions, including one starring Elvis Presley, sequel to "Blue Denim," John Brown's Body," with some slight changes. But the top picture at Twentieth Century-Fox, Harrison emphasized, will be $9.5 million production of "The Greatest Story Ever Told." This has been and designing stages for the

'Purple Gang' Has Powerful Screen Impact

Lindsey Parsons' "The Purple Gang," filmed for Allied Artists release, is a powerful depiction of the Detroit juvenile mob which grew to become one of the nation's most feared bands of racketeers.

The Jack De Witt screenplay was written with no punches pulled, and Frank McDonald's direction, the talents of stars Barry Sullivan, Robert Blake and Elaine Edwards and the photography of Ellis Cantor bring it to the screen with an impact which won't soon be forgotten.

The story, of course, stems from the activities of the mob, formed by youngsters in their teens, which spread its activities from smuggling liquor during the early prohibition days to trafficking in narcotics, gambling, prostitution and in the "protection racket."

Barry Sullivan, always to be counted upon to turn in a commendable performance, strikes a new high in "The Purple Gang" in the starring role of the police officer assigned to smash the band of hoodlums.

The role of the young and brilliant gang leader and ruthless killer is filled by Robert Blake, whose performance gives him every right to wear the tag of "star."

Elaine Edwards co-stars as Sullivan's wife. As the young woman who loses her unborn baby, goes mad and dies after gangsters try to intimidate her husband through her, she gives a portrayal so fine, so filled with understanding that Hollywood will be unwise if it doesn't keep her busy with other exceptional roles.

LITTLE THEATRE

Blizzard Heralds 'Sabrina Fair'

By JOHN CALE Staff Writer

There is an old tune about mad dogs and Englishmen going out in the mid-day sun. But, one faithful playgoer who is a native of Portsmouth, England, ventured out in the midnight snow Friday and saw to it that Little Theatre's "Sabrina Fair" got underway opening night.

The audience was scattered but just as determined as the cast, crew and director to get the show on the road with or without snowplow. It required genuine love of the stage for the cast to go on at Director Ullal's signal and come up with a first rate show. The stage was windy and the temperature was at the freezing mark.

But who wants a blizzard to stop the critique? Such weather may dull the points on a barbed wire fence, but only if the points are iced over. And it would take more than a little ice and snow to hide the sharp edges of Samuel Taylor's comedy. Script writing is on the way to becoming a lost art and Little Theatre has brought out two comedies — "Janus" as well as the present play — which show the best in the comedy writing.

A few bouquets on the local scene are due Katharine Magruder and her construction crew for the top quality backdrop. This one is worth the trip out to the Selman Field Playhouse just to look at, even if you don't have a taste for sophisticated comedy.

The acting in "Sabrina Fair" brought the best out of some of the old reliables and uncovered some significant new faces. Lt. Col. Richard Longfellow who sat wordless on a Navy court in "Caine Mutiny," took the part of "Chautauque Fairchild, the father of the title role. The light colonel took the slight change in uniform as a natural thing. He was the most convincing player of the evening.

Sabrina Fairchild, the chauffeur's daughter, was played by Violet Cotton. This part of many moods was well handled and showed a fine sense of emotional shading. In addition, Mrs. Cotton did a commendable job of vocal projection.

Jack Rawls, Patsy Pickett and Joanne Busby — all veterans of and are now on the road to recovery.

Jack Ansel, of New York, is now at home after just finishing a novel, "My Brother The Bear," which is to be published some time in the summer.

Two of the cast of "Pajama Game," Dell Moore and W. J. "Bill" Haddad, are providing the entertainment at the Seminal for Secretaries to be held at the Virginia Hotel on February 20th. We know the secretaries are in for a treat!

Don't forget tryouts are to be held for the musical "Guys and Dolls" on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, February 22, 23 and 24th at the Selman Field Playhouse. It is necessary that you be present all three nights. Come on out, and let's have a big turnout for Ivan.

See "Sabrina Fair."

Little Theater

"Sabrina Fair" opened Friday night with a full house and an enthusiastic audience. There are still four performances of the play, and you may make your reservation by calling FAirfax 3-4263 from 2:00 until 7:00 p.m.

Among those who attended the performance of Betty Davis and Barry Sullivan reading Carl Sandburg, at Ruston on Friday night, were the following Little Theatre members: Henry Haas, Jr., Julius Cain, Lallage Feazel, Ivan Ullal, Helen Seligman, John Henry Vaughn, V. P. Dalrymple, Betty Bandy, Tige and Gloria Mullins, Martha Garrison, Steve and Claude Fuller, Eleta Latham, Dr. Edward and Dr. Katherine Foster, Bessie and Lamar Mulligan, Jo Ann Magruder, Bill Cody, Jim Knuckles, Dick Crider, Gertrude Sandrock, Almedia Babb, Glenda Sue Young and George Brian.

Miss Davis and Mr. Sullivan gave an outstanding performance. Miss Davis, during the first act, wore a black floor-length formal, accented by a tangerine panel from the waist in the back, with short white gloves. During the second act, she wore an electric blue taffeta formal, with red taffeta in the back. The waist was striking with a red regal ribbon across the waist, full skirted, and with this, Miss Davis wore long white gloves. The gowns were designed by Orry Kelly of Hollywood.

If you see Marie Dell Huff wearing a broad smile, attribute it to the new granddaughter presented by daughter, Margaret. Congratulations! Congratulations! Mary Gill, Roz Haas, Joe Kern and Ruth Shipman feeling better.

Birch Society

To Organize Monroe Chapter

Dr. Medford Evans of Natchitoches, area coordinator for the John Birch Society, will conduct a meeting here Tuesday night in the Cameo Room of the Virginia Hotel for the purpose of organizing a chapter of the society in Monroe.

Dr. Evans said that the meeting would be held at 7:30 p.m., and urged that anyone interested in joining or learning about the organization attend.

He described the society as a "patriotic action society." Dr. Evans is a former professor at Northwestern State College in Natchitoches and is now employed by the Birch Society.

He has also served as chief of security training of the Atomic Energy Commission and worked at the Oak Ridge Atomic Energy plant. He is also author of the book, "The Secret War for the A-Bomb."

Evans said that he is currently in the process of organizing chapters of the society in Mississippi, Texas and Louisiana.

BIRD IN THE HAND

ELKHART, Ind. (AP)—Gerald Line wonders if a $2 parakeet is really worth a $9 vacuum cleaner hose. Line's 12-year-old daughter, Patricia, was cleaning a rug when the family parakeet, Baby, was sucked through the nozzle. Firemen cut the hose and rescued one shaky—but clean—bird.

ENGLISH HUMOR

"Punch," the English humor magazine, was not at first a success when it began publishing in 1941. But Mark Lemon, its editor, kept it alive with the rich royalties from several hit plays he had written for the London stage.

STERLING

NO DOWN PAYMENT

THIS neat 3 bedroom home is just a few minutes drive from the business district of Sterling. Thoroughly carpeted and draped living room radiates gracious living. All 3 bedrooms are extra large. Two cherry baths eliminate "traffic problems." This lovely home is situated on a 1 1/2 acre lot, site is beautiful and privacy. There's no "rich man's price" on this feature - rich home as it's priced below $14,000. There's no down payment for Veterans. If you're not a Veteran, you can purchase this home for a nominal assumption with payments of $41.

HEART CATCHER

ON RIVEREND in West Monroe, this 2 bedroom home with white asbestos shingles is neat and needs a touch. Its oak floors are easily kept. The living room has false fireplace. In 20x120 lot this home would make for comfortable living for anyone. Owner has already left town and is open for any reasonable offer.

GEORGE WASHINGTON WAS FOR IT

HOME ownership, that is. And you will be too when you read the following. The owner of this nice 2 bedroom home in Riverend Area, West Monroe, is selling because he wants acreage. This is a beautiful home located on a nice landscaped 50x150 lot with a storm fence in back and garden area. The garage has two rooms built onto it. The asbestos siding and aluminum awnings add to the value and attractiveness of ownership of this home. It has oak floors throughout, separate dining room, attic fan, and floor furnace. The owner will sell or trade! Call us; we might be able to work something out.

THE HOME DISTINCTIVE

THIS spacious "L" shaped brick home in the Broadmoor Addition would be the "find" of many home shoppers. Chances are you would not drive by it because it is not located on a heavily traveled street - it's quiet and serene! The large corner lot has five large pecan trees. The roof has extra large overhang and a covered porch off the entire East Side. Sliding glass doors open from the family room onto one end of the porch and from the living room onto the other end. The kitchen, den, and hallway have sandblasted paneled walls of different shades of green. A Roman brick wall at end of den furnishes added attractiveness. The two extra large bedrooms have built-in wardrobes separating closets on either side. It has two complete tile baths, a central air conditioning unit, built-in oven and range, select birch cabinets, formica top counters, telephone jacks, and electrical outlets in spare. There are approximately 1500 square feet of heated space and with the double carport and storage, approximately 2200 feet under roof. All this can be yours for less than $21,000. Let us show you today.

REVENUE PROPERTY

THE REVENUE of this property now is $170 per month and when the owner sells and moves out another $800 could be added. This is a well kept duplex with garage apartment in back. An inspection would reveal that this property will be a minimum. Each apartment has a private bath. The duplex has sand blasted paneled walls.
